Weeds crowd the outside yard, but there's still enough potential inside the Clover Meat Packing plant to make a co-op takeover worthwhile, organizers believe

Producers' co-op eyes old Clover Packing

BY MARGIE FUSCO
Staff Correspondent

SELINSGROVE — Birth is seldom easy. Whether it's babies or calves or co-ops, there are bound to be labor pains. That's what 65 farmers learned when they gathered on May 16 at the Dutch Pantry in Hummel's Wharf, Snyder County, to start a cooperative beef marketing program.

In autumn 1984, a group of cattle producers and agricultural businessmen met in the same room to talk about improving the beef market in Pennsylvania. They formed the Beef Marketing Development Committee (BMDC), an ad hoc group committed to investing in beef marketing. With support from PACMA, the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association marketing cooperative, BMDC obtained the option to purchase the abandoned Clover Packing Plant in Selinsgrove.

With the first groundwork laid, BMDC was ready to face other growers at this public meeting, to invite them to join in a cooperative association to purchase the plant, renovate it, and go into operation marketing members' beef.

The attendees came from a corridor the length of central Pennsylvania, a strip of 14 counties from Bradford to Cumberland. They included beef, veal, dairy, and even sheep growers from operations of all sizes.

The evening began at the plant site, off Route 204. The plant had been closed since 1980, when its owner went bankrupt. As the farmers toured the rooms and followed the meat processing step

USDA adopts export plan with incentive provision

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has adopted a bonus-incentive plan to boost agricultural exports in the face of increasing foreign competition.

The new trade program, modeled closely after a Farm Bureau "Bonus Incentive Plan" announced almost two month ago, was unveiled as Congressional committees took action on similar programs of their own.

USDA's plan would use $2 billion worth of Commodity Credit Corporation inventories as bonuses for sales generated in specific world markets through fiscal 1988. Specific details are not expected to be released until June 1.

USDA had first proposed using the plan specifically to counter European community subsidies that give those countries a competitive advantage in selling agricultural commodities worldwide.

Later this week, however, USDA officials privately agreed to use the bonus plan to regain worldwide markets lost in the last few years because of unfair subsidies or the strength of the U.S. dollar.

The proposal is quite similar to the Farm Bureau's BICEP plan announced in late March. And though the organization indicated that it would like to reserve judgement on the package until the specifics are known, spokesmen obviously were pleased that the administration had pursued the idea.

"We're pretty happy with it," said Farm Bureau News Service Director Bill Eckmann. "The concept is there."

Eckmann said his organization is continuing to meet with USDA and Congressional leaders to shape the specifics of the proposal

Wallace Lindell, information director for the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, admitted that the administration had accepted a plan similar to the one proposed by the Farm Bureau, but noted that similar incentive ideas had been tried in the past, most recently in a 1983 wheat flour sale to Egypt.

He did admit, however, that the national farm organization played an important role in advancing the current idea, adding, "maybe the Farm Bureau first articulated it."

In announcing the administration plan, Agriculture Secretary John Block noted that the incentive initiatives should be geared to enhancing sales in the international market, and must be used in markets which have been taken over by competing nations, using unfair trade practices.

"We are not going to use a shotgun approach with our plan by spreading our bonus commodities across the board in the world market," Block said. "Instead, we will be taking careful aim, continuously targeting areas over the next three years where we can do the most good for our farmers.

"This administration remains fully committed to market-oriented international trade policies. Until our agricultural policies allow us to be competitive and until a fair trade environment exists around the world, we will pursue this and other initiatives."

Although the department feels it has existing statutory authority to implement the plan, it reportedly would like to have permanent legislative blessing for the program included in the Omnibus Farm Bill now before Congress.

Committees in both the House and Senate reviewed export incentives as part of their general deliberations on the Farm Bill.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry reported two bills to increase the competitiveness of U.S. agricultural exports.

The Committee ordered reported S. 721, has amended, a bill to exempt certain U.S. Department of Agriculture export programs from cargo preference requirements. The bill essentially returns cargo preference practices to the same status prior to the decision of a federal court in February which made the Department's blended credit program subject to cargo preference requirements

Dairy Month coverage to begin next week

LANCASTER — Lancaster Farming will honor the dairy industry with its annual Dairy Month coverage which begins in next week's edition.

This newspaper's editorial staff has devoted extensive amounts of time and effort in preparing this review, which will continue throughout the five editions in June.

Coverage will include comprehensive reviews of virtually every aspect of dairying — from inputs, feed and finance to production, processing, housing and promotion.

There will also be interviews with key officials and accounts of the latest developments in many important areas of research.

Watch for next week's edition for the beginning of our in-depth account of the dairy industry.

IMPROVE HERD HEALTH

Pennfield Dry Cow Program

The 60 day period before freshening is a most important time in the life cycle of the cow. During the period she will "store-up" vitamin, mineral, and energy reserves which she will draw on during her following peak of lactation. Over 50% of her calf weight will develop during this period, and being a good mother, she will supply nutrients to her calf before she will rebuild her own body reserves.

Good dairymen have seen that proper feeding management during this critical-period, means easier calving, better appetite during early lactation, and cows breed back better because they have nutritional reserves to draw on during peak lactation.

Balanced Nutrition Is The Key

A properly formulated dry cow program allows the dairymen to "control" the nutrient intake of the cow. Calcium and phosphorus levels must be properly maintained and roughages should be checked for protein, energy, calcium and phosphorus.

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin

Lancaster County Agriculture Agent
Phone 717-394-6851

To Recognize Stage of Maturity

Harvesting at the proper stage of maturity is the most important factor in the process of making top quality hay or silage. Many farmers allow their crops to become too mature before cutting. This is very easy to do early in the spring when weather conditions are poor for making hay.

The legumes such as alfalfa and clover are at their peak when in the bud to early blossom stage. The grasses are highest in feed nutrients at heading time. Winter grains contain the most feeding value when made into silage in the blossom stage.

The crop may be easier to cure later in the spring but not contain top feeding values. The making of crops into silage, instead of hay, early in the season is one way to preserve maximum nutritional value.

To Check Stored Pesticides

The shelf life of most pesticides, when stored in their original containers, is usually several years. The greatest problem with stored pesticides comes from freezing temperatures. Cold winter temperatures may cause a breakdown of the emulsifier in liquid materials. These materials may not mix properly when added to the spray water.

To determine if the pesticide will still mix properly with water, follow this easy procedure: (1) place ½ pint of water in a small container; (2) add ½ to 1 teaspoon of the pesticide; (3) shake or stir thoroughly (you should get a milky mixture); (4) let stand for about one hour. The spray mix should remain an even milky mixture. If an oily scum or layer forms on top, or if a layer of curds appear on top, don't use the material.

To Check Water Supplies

Water is one of our most important resources, and it should be checked periodically. Many families depend on wells for their water supply. But they pay little attention to the water unless the pump fails or the well runs dry. Your water should be tested annually to determine its quality.

It is important to test water following any reconstruction or addition to the water supply or its distribution system. Water supplies should be checked whenever a disease occurs that may have been caused by unsafe drinking water. If water changes in taste, odor or appearance for no reason, it should be tested.

There are many tests and analyses that can be used. Two of the most important are for nitrates and bacteria.

To Be Aware of Ticks

The tick season is here. These pests may be on almost any dog or person that walks through uncultivated fields or woody areas from May to September.

Ticks await their victims on low-growing shrubs and on tall grass. They attach to, and feed on the blood of, dogs and humans as well as many other animals.

To control the American dog tick, first clean the area of tall grass and weeds on which the ticks await their victims. Also, treat bushes 20 to 30 feet on either side of paths with either Sevin, Diazinon or Lindane. The dog should also be treated with a 5% Sevin dust at weekly intervals, or as needed, to control ticks.

Morris proposes $2 million ag productivity program

HARRISBURG – Rep. Samuel W. Morris, D-Pottstown, is calling for creation of a $2.3 million Pennsylvania Agricultural Crop and Livestock Productivity Program to help insure long-term prosperity for the state's largest industry.

The legislation (H.B. 1224), co-sponsored by Morris, who is Chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, would set aside funds for acid rain research, avian flu and other animal disease research, diagnosis and treatment. It also would underwrite an on-going poultry disease surveillance to prevent a repeat of the avian flu outbreak which devastated the industry last year.

Agriculture is Pennsylvania's biggest cash industry and its biggest growth industry, the Chester County lawmaker noted.

He said it was the duty of state government to protect its principal industries and to be on the lookout for threats to such key elements of economy. Government, he said, should provide the kinds of aid and services which individual entrepreneurs cannot generate for themselves.

Principal products in Pennsylvania's agricultural mix, he noted, are grains for feed and human consumption, truck and fruit crops, dairy products and poultry and other meat products. A flaw in Pennsylvania's current services to farmers is the state's failure to adequately address the problems of pollution on crops and diseases on animals, he said.

The plan would set aside $400,000 for acid rain research, $300,000 for epidemiology and health economics training at veterinary schools concentrating on large animals, $275,000 for a computerized diagnostic and tracking network and $153,000 for livestock disease diagnosis. Also, the plan earmarks $183,000 for a field investigation team on animal diseases, $375,000 for avian influenza research, $500,000 for poultry research and surveillance programs and $169,000 for diagnostic services at poultry laboratories.

The lawmaker said there was a lesson in avian flu "which apparently has been lost on" the state Department of Agriculture.

In 1979, an eminent epidemiologist, Dr. Daniel Coher, recommended the creation of a "modern early-warning epidemic intelligence system in the Commonwealth" for animal disease similar to that underway in New York state. Those recommendations, according to Morris, were not implemented and the avian flu epidemic, which could have been better contained with a more effective early warning system, almost wiped out Pennsylvania's poultry industry.

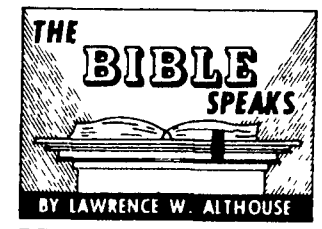
State government, said Morris, has the duty to work to prevent a repeat in the poultry industry or in another animal area.

His program, he added, will not attempt to seek a solution to the acid rain problem. Rather, he said, it will underwrite research to determine what kinds of crops do best under current conditions and which hybrids can be most productive.

Morris noted that besides avian influenza, Pennsylvania agriculture is threatened by such animal diseases as pseudorabies, wildlife rabies, trichinosis and various cattle diseases.

The Chester County legislator noted that the Thornburgh Administration has cut more than $1 million from livestock disease research programs in the Department of Agriculture in its 1985-86 budget proposal.

The Crop and Livestock Productivity Program would restore the cuts and move into advanced animal disease control and research into acid-rain resistant crops.



THE LIMITS OF WISDOM
May 26, 1985

Background Scripture:
Proverbs 1:7-19; 3:5-8; 14:1-12.

Devotional Reading:
Proverbs 6:1-15.

One of the achievements of understanding is the ability to differentiate between intelligence, education, and wisdom. Lots of people fail to distinguish the important differences between them.

Some of the most intelligent people I've known have not much of a formal education (although an education could have enhanced their superior intelligence). I've also known some people who were well educated and obviously quite intelligent, but that did not necessarily say that they were also wise. In fact, some of the most foolish people I've known (and this can include myself) have been both well-educated and quite intelligent.

LEARNED FOOLS

I have frequently noted that some people seem to reach a point in life where, surrounded upon success after success, they have come to believe that all their judgements and decisions are guaranteed to be right. Hitler, for example, began the Second World War with a string of brilliant victories. As time went by, however, he was so intoxicated by his success, that he refused to follow the wise advice of those around him. The result was crushing defeat. I have also known businessmen with brilliant track records for success after success who, eventually, have come to bitter and humiliating ends. The reason: they forgot or perhaps never knew that there are always limits to human wisdom.

The problem is that our cleverness often leads us in the direction of pride and self satisfaction, which is the opposite direction from wisdom. If we are really learned or smart or both, we will realize the limitations of these faculties. The result will be humility, not pride. The more we know, the more we will realize how much we don't know. The more we understand, the more we will acknowledge the enormity of what we do not understand.

WISE IN WHOSE EYES?

But there's more to it than learning our own limitations. The writer of Proverbs counsels us: "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight" (3:5). The more we learn about life, the more we will realize that none of us, by ourselves, is sufficient. There are times when we have thought as clearly as we can think, when we have persevered as long as we could, and worked as hard as we have strength, and it still was not enough. Real learning, intelligence and wisdom mean that we find there is something beyond ourselves on which we must ultimately rely and someone to whom we must eventually turn. "Trust in the Lord.." is the sage's counsel, but it takes a truly smart person to do it. Only the smart person realizes that smartness is never enough – no matter how brilliant it may seem to ourselves, no matter how much it may dazzle others.

When we have reached the extremities of our own wisdom, it is then that we enter to the precincts of the wisdom of God.

Penn State adds ag options

UNIVERSITY PARK – Two new agricultural minors have been created at The Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. William C. Richardson, executive vice president and provost of the University, informed the Penn State Board of Trustees today (May 17) that no additional funding is required for these changes.

The new minor in wildlife science provides nonmajors with an introduction to the principles and practices of wildlife research and management, he said, offering an introduction to wildlife conservation, mammalogy and ornithology, as well as wildlife ecology and management.

The new minor in poultry technology and management enables students to focus their studies in the poultry field while at the same time pursuing a major such as animal bioscience, agricultural business management or agricultural education, Dr. Richardson said.

He added that no new courses are required for either of the new minors, both of which are in the College of Agriculture.

SINCE MAY IS BEEF MONTH, WE WISH NOT ONLY TO SALUTE OUR BEEF PRODUCERS BUT ALSO, TO THANK YOU, FOR PROVIDING AMERICA AND OTHER PARTS OF THE WORLD WITH ONE OF OUR MOST IMPORTANT FOOD PRODUCTS

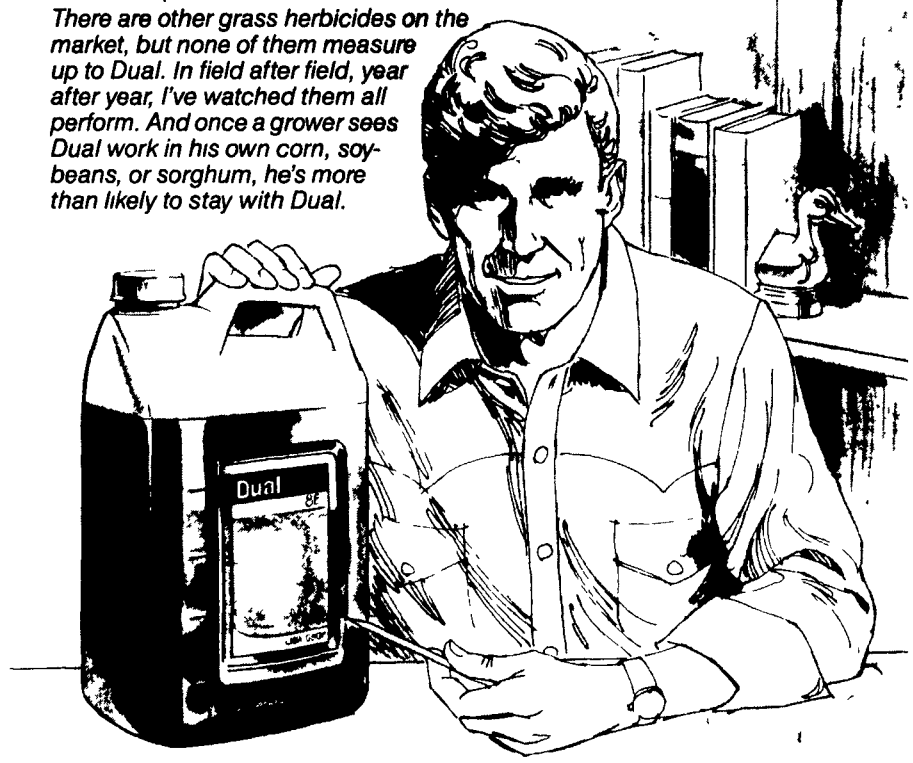
"HERE'S WHY I SELL DUAL®"

There are other grass herbicides on the market, but none of them measure up to Dual. In field after field, year after year, I've watched them all perform. And once a grower sees Dual work in his own corn, soybeans, or sorghum, he's more than likely to stay with Dual.



Why I recommend DUAL:

- Excellent control of the problems like nutsedge, fall panicum, and foxtails And it controls black nightshade in beans
- Lasts longer to keep late grasses from spoiling harvest
- Yield Dual delivers excellent grass control which has been proven to be a key factor in yield studies
- Low per acre cost Because Dual rates are measured in pints, not quarts

Finally, I support Dual because Dual's the only one helping to get the farmers' message to the public on network television That helps all of us

Holstein group honored

WASHINGTON — The House Agriculture Committee has unanimously approved a resolution recognizing the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

The resolution was sponsored by Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., and Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., Ranking Minority Member of the Committee.

The resolution notes that the association, including more than 44,000 breeders of purebred, registered Holstein dairy cattle was organized on May 25, 1885. U.S. Holsteins, which produce more than 90 percent of the nation's milk supply, are recognized worldwide as superior breeding stock.

The resolution, which will now be forwarded to the House, expresses the sense of the House that "recognition be extended to the Holstein-Friesian Association of America for its most noteworthy contribution to the great American agricultural revolution and ... its contribution to the genetic advancement and the efficiency of the national dairy herd."

Scaling named SCS chief

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has appointed Texas rancher Wilson Scaling to be chief of the Soil Conservation Service (SCS).

Scaling will be the eighth SCS chief in the agency's 50-year history. He replaces Peter C. Myers who has been confirmed by the U.S. Senate as assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources and environment.

"Like Peter Myers before him, Wilson Scaling will bring the perspective of the agricultural community to the office of the chief of the Soil Conservation Service," said Block. "Wilson is an active conservationist and a leader in the agricultural community."

Scaling, 46, is general manager for the family ranching operation, which dates back to the early 1880s, in north-central Texas. The ranch is a cow-calf and yearling operation.

Pennsylvania's ag preservation proposal; a review

By Stanford Lembeck,
Associate Professor of Rural Sociology
Extension Penn
State University

STATE COLLEGE — Pennsylvania's farmers may soon have a new tool to preserve valuable farmland. A recently introduced amendment to the state's five-year old Agricultural Area Security Law would provide state funds for the purchase of agricultural conservation easements from farms threatened by development pressures.

Senate Bill 641 proposes a $50 million state fund to buy the "development value" rights of farms to prevent the development of housing, shopping centers and industrial parks on farmland. Compensation for a farm's development potential would allow farmers to keep on farming without having to sell out to developers. Local economies would be strengthened because the basic agricultural industry would be retained while new development could be directed toward non-agricultural areas.

This approach to farmland preservation is being used in Maryland, New York and several New England states. As proposed in the Pennsylvania legislation, landowners who participate in the Agricultural Area Security Program would be eligible to sell agricultural conservation easements to a county agricultural conservation board.

The county board would set priorities for purchasing easements based on the development threat to farmland. Farms under immediate and intense development pressure would get high priority. Agricultural conservation easements would be held for a minimum of 25 years, thus assuring the long-term continuation of farming in the area.

A state agricultural conservation board would administer and distribute the funds to participating counties. Half of the $50 million fund would be allocated on the basis of a county's proportion of the total real estate transfer taxes collected statewide. The other half would be distributed according to the county's status as a producer of agricultural products. For example, a heavy agricultural producing county would get $8 of state funds for every $1 of matching county funds. Lesser-producing counties would be eligible for $4 of state funds for each county dollar.

It's too soon to tell how the proposal will fare in the state legislature, but several features are sure to be controversial. The $50 million price tag will certainly be an issue, as well as the funding formula. Counties may resist the local matching requirements, or at least push for uniform matching from the state without being tied to the value of agricultural production.

Some farmland will be removed from the development marketplace with the purchase of conservation easements, but that shouldn't create any significant scarcity in land available for homes and businesses. Pennsylvania's population is shifting, from the cities and boroughs to townships, but there's plenty of land unsuitable for agriculture that can absorb these people.

One impact of the proposal to purchase agricultural conservation easements is sue to be an increase in the number of Agricultural Security Areas. There are fewer than 50 such areas at the present time, but the possibility of a strong financial inducement to preserve farmland should cause that number to skyrocket.

USDA program would cut sulfa residues in swine

WASHINGTON — As part of a comprehensive regulatory program, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is developing new tests that could better control sulfa residues in slaughtered hogs.

The agency announced its intentions with advance notice of proposed rulemaking. Details will be proposed following a 102-day public comment period, said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

According to Houston, pork with more than 0.1 parts per million sulfa is adulterated under the law and must be condemned. Violative levels of sulfa drugs can remain in hogs at slaughter if feed consumed in the previous days contained traces of the drug.

"According to our residue monitoring data, sulfa violation rates have increased to about 6 percent in recent years," Houston said. "While industry groups are responding to the increase, a new regulatory program — including sulfa testing of hogs at slaughter by USDA inspectors — also may be needed."

Houston said the industry and the government worked together in 1978-1979 and succeeded in controlling sulfa residues. That campaign produced a dramatic decline in violations – from a high of more than 9 percent of slaughtered hogs in 1977 to approximately 4 percent in 1980, he said.

"We are confident that success can be repeated, especially in light of technological advances made since that time," said Houston.

"USDA is field testing new quick tests that farmers could use to check feed and live hogs for sulfa. And, USDA inspectors could perform the tests as part of a regulatory program at the slaughterhouse.

"Because testing could delay slaughter operations and have a significant impact on the pork industry, plans are being announced before actual rule changes are proposed," he said.

According to Houston, specifics of the program will reflect public comments. The program is expected to include:

- routine in-plant testing of hogs for sulfas;
- retention at the slaughterhouse of entire hog shipments for laboratory analysis if routine testing reveals sulfa residues;
- condemnation of pork proven by laboratory analysis to have violative sulfa levels;
- control of the disposition of condemned carcasses; and
- intensified testing of hogs from sources that previously marketed animals with violative sulfa residue levels.

Comments on USDA's Federal Register notice are due Aug. 30, and may be sent to the FSIS Hearing Clerk, Room 2637-South, FSIS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Seminar on pig management

LANCASTER — A seminar on Managing Pigs for Profit will be conducted by a midwestern swine veterinary consultant at the Farm & Home Center, on June 18.

Dr. Al Leman, professor of swine medicine and director of the Swine Center at the University of Minnesota, will discuss reducing pig losses, boosting profits and utilizing records. The program will begin at 3 p.m. and run until 9 p.m.

The seminar is one of a series sponsored by International Pigletter, of which Leman is one of the contributing authors. The seminars are designed for specialized hog farmers and swine veterinarians. Leman conducts a series of such seminars each winter in the Corn Belt. This is the first time he has brough the program to the East.

Leman is known world-wide as a frequent speaker both at scientific meetings and pork producer sessions. He is the editor of the reference book "Diseases of Swine," succeeding the late Howard H. Dunne of Pennsylvania State University.

He consults for large hog operations around the world and will bring to the seminar a scientific approach combined with practical observations on swine farms around the world, according to Neal Black, Editor of Pigletter, the international newsletter on swine health and management.

Processors and their contract growers: Farmers deal

BY MARGIE FUSCO,
Staff Correspondent

NORTHUMBERLAND – Although its $5 million in purchases don't really make it a major force in the state's vegetable market, Furman Foods, Inc., has earned a statewide reputation as a "producer's processor" and a friend of Pennsylvania agriculture.

"Furman is a good outfit to grow for. They realize the growers are the ones who put the tomatoes in the cans," says Joe Anchor, a third-generation farmer. Joe and his father are among the 322 farmers who will do contract growing for Furman Foods, Inc.

In 1984 these farmers, most of whom live within a 50-mile radius of the Northumberland, Pennsylvania, plant, realized $5 million from 4,312 acres they planted. Nearly two-thirds of the acreage was in tomatoes, with the remainder in peas, snap beans, and peppers.

"Our product starts with the grower," says David Geise, president of the company and third-generation food processor. "What sets us apart from other processors is that we contract for a number of acres, not for a certain volume. We're not going to leave our growers with a large volume in the field. The farmer takes the risk of growing and dealing with the weather. We owe it to them to take the risk in the marketplace. We feel it's a pretty good balance."

Although the bumper tomato crop in 1984 has left the firm with a large surplus of canned tomato products, Geise has no second thoughts about the acreage system. "Last year the grower made out," he says. "Maybe this year will be more to our advantage. We both come out ahead in the long run, and that's what's important."

Geise notes that the company also works to be consistent in its standards for crops. "On a long year, we're not going to change our standards and leave the grower holding produce. We want to put out a consistent, high-quality product," he says, but adds that on short years the firm may lower their standards somewhat to take the produce that's available.

Geise's grandfather, John Wesley Furman, left the blasting powder mines in 1918 and borrowed money to buy a farm in Tuckahoe Valley, now called Northumberland. He worked nights on the railroad and farmed during the day.

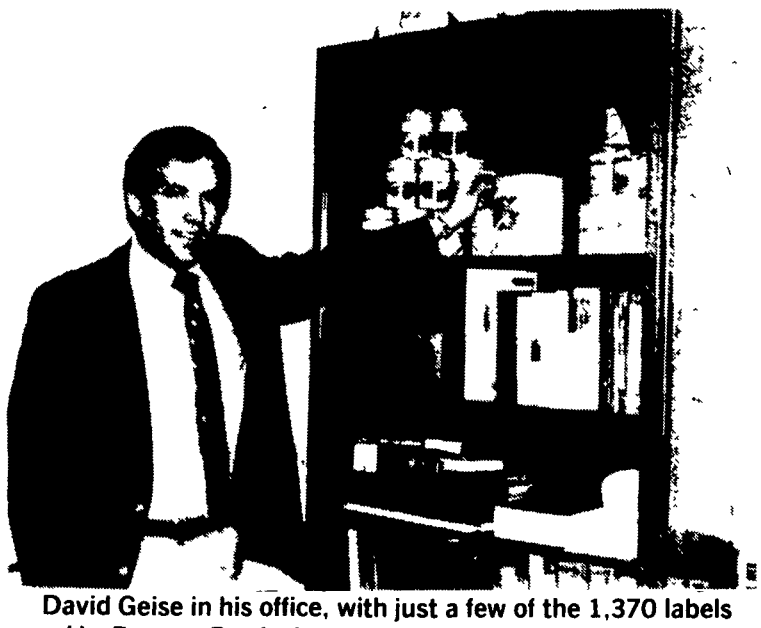
When he produced a good tomato crop in 1921, Furman found he couldn't sell it all. Store owners suggested that he can the rest of his crop and sell it for winter.

That first year Furman and his wife processed 360 glass jars of tomatoes on their kitchen stove. The 30 dozen jars sold, and local stores began to ask for more. Soon the J.W. Furman Cannery had grown into an industry and began offering lines of other fresh packed vegetables as well as tomatoes.

In 1944, J.W. Furman turned the business over to two of his sons and two sons-in-law, including David Geise's father Norman. In the next year, the business packed 77,000 cases of produce. In 1969, that number passed the one million mark. Today Furman Foods, Inc., produces three million cases of food with 165 items under 1370 labels.

In 1980, Furman Foods acquired a processing plant in Allentown. "When we bought it, we didn't have a clear idea of where the produce would come from," Geise admits. The produce, it turned out, was in their own backyard.

Ten miles to the north, in Milton, American Home Foods was making a tough economic decision. After years of using locally grown tomatoes in their Chef Boy-ar-dee products, the company was going to shift to the less expensive California market, and drop its local growing program.



David Geise in his office, with just a few of the 1,370 labels used by Furman Foods, Inc.

Joe Anchor and his father were among the local farmers who were losing out. "We just couldn't compete with the west coast," Joe recalls. After 30 years of tomato-growing, they were looking for a new market when Furman announced it would like to get involved, to supply produce to the new Allentown facility.

In addition to picking up local growers, Furman was able to hire two former American Home Foods field men. Anchor says, "They got two of the best men in the business." Ne notes that they are very responsive to the farmers' needs.

Subsequently, Furman Foods made the decision to incorporate the Allentown facility into the Northumberland site and undertook a $9 million expansion. The expansion has included adding two new evaporators, the first in the Eastern United States, that can save 50% of on energy over other cooking methods and can process 90 tons of tomatoes every hour.

The expansion has also allowed the company to go from four to seven filling lines and has given the firm the capacity to process 106,000 lbs. of food per hour during peak season.

While looking forward, Furman Foods savors its strong ties to the past. It is primarily a family industry, with the fourth generation now coming in. The organization opens every board meeting with a prayer and scripture reading.

Geise explains, "We believe we operate with the help of God, and that by His grace we continue to work together as a family. God is our coach and constant helper."

This reverence does not mean the firm is out of step. At a recent employee meeting, videotapes of companies highlight with the "In Search of Excellence" book and television series were shown, and Geise notes, "We can stack up pretty well with the excellent companies."

Completed products stand ready for labeling and shipping. After an order is received, cans will be labeled and shipped.

Cans are filled with baked beans in this production line at Furman Foods, Inc.

Furman employees share in the company through a stock ownership plan. They are also invited to contribute suggestions for change and improvement.

"Our people are more than hands," Geise says. "They have good ideas. Ideas shouldn't come from management down. Our people are more familiar with their jobs than management is. They know how to make the line work better or the crops grow better. We rely on them to tell us."

Geise characterizes the operation as "a marketing-run company." Top management works with five-year projections, and all crops are planned two years in advance with cooperation among the marketing, production, field, and sales departments.

Unlike some canneries, Furman Foods is a year-round industry. In addition to packing fresh produce in season, the firm does a large dry packing business with beans. Furman Foods employs 170 full-time workers and 350 part-time workers, in addition to growers.

The food business isn't always rosy. Geise points to competition from imports and the California market, which holds down food prices, costing both processors and growers money. A combination of low food prices and local difficulties made Furman Foods take a long, hard look at its business in 1982.

The Pennsylvania tax base wasn't ideal. Worse, the Department of Transportation had put a 12-ton limit on the road leading to the cannery and the Department of Environmental Resources was suggestiong an expensive change to the firm's waste treatment facility.

For awhile, the industry debated moving out of state. But state and local agencies came together with the industry and ironed out most of the problems. (For example, a new road was constructed to the cannery through the cooperation of Furman, the Department of Transportation, county government, and the economic development council.) In 1983 the company made a renewed commitment to the area by launching its expansion program.

The commitment goes even further. Furman, for example, was one of eight state firms to promote Pennsylvania products at the recent NASDA National food and agriculture exposition in Kansas City, Mo.

"I'm an eternal optimist," Geise notes. "I think we have an excellent market for Pennsylvania agriculture if growers, processors and buyers continue to work together."

He adds that the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is to be congratulated for its efforts in promoting Pennsylvania-grown produce.

"If everyone in Pennsylvania would buy Pennsylvania-grown and processed vegetables, we would have a tremendous market," he said. "I hope all farmers, not just our growers, will think about that when they go to the store. Farmers should be supporting their own industry."

John Wesley Furman seems to have prophesied such efforts when he once told his sons, "It's much easier to make a success when all those involved work together."

Over-order pricing campaign continues in Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG — Charles Wismer, Master of the Pennsylvania State Grange and Chester L. Reed, State Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union have announced that they are going to resume their efforts in signing independent dairy farmers into the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA).

During the month of March, the two general farm organizations sponsored over 20 informational meetings for dairy farmers across Pennsylvania

The meetings centered around a full explanation of RCMA including the desirability of the bargaining agency to establish over-order prices on Class 1 milk in the eastern part of the United States.

Reed stated, "Our efforts to sign the independent dairy farmers were placed on hold the last month because of Eastern Milk Producers' failure to join RCMA. However, during the past week, Eastern has made formal application for membership, which now means that all the major milk cooperatives in Federal Orders #1 and #2 will be members of RCMA."

Wismer stated, "As a result of the previous informational meetings, we have nearly 20 counties organized with dairy farmers ready to aid us in signing the independent dairy farmers."

Wismer further explained that the by-laws of RCMA regarding finances have been modified, " to make the bargaining agency even more acceptable to all dairy farmers."

Both Wismer and Reed are strong supporters of RCMA's attempt to negotiate over-order prices in Class 1 milk. They point out that prices paid to dairy farmers in Federal Order #2 (New York/New Jersey market) have already dropped $1.15 per hundred weight since January and will drop considerably more before the end of 1985.

Arden Tewksbury, a leader in the RCMA movement said, "We really had the momentum going during March and early April. We had support from many farm groups, county agents, news media, and most importantly, many dairy farmers. Now with Eastern involved, it should increase our ability to sign up the independent dairy farmers."

RCMA was established in the early 1970's, and in 18 months collected over $20 million for dairy farmers in New England and the western part of New York state.

Now with declining prices paid to area dairy farmers during 1985 and with near disastrous prices estimated for the near future, it is all the more important for RCMA to become successful in negotiating for dairy farmers.

Meetings are already planned for several counties according to Wismer and Reed, and they intend to intensify their efforts during the up-coming weeks.

Any dairy farmer or farm organization willing to help with the project, should contact the Pennsylvania Farmers Union at 1/800/932-4629 or the Pennsylvania State Grange at 1/800/242-9661.

First U.S. Dairy Forum stimulates discussion

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Lively and spirited debates and forthright discussions were characteristic of the two-and-a-half-day U.S. Dairy Forum — a first-of-its-kind conclave for 275 leaders from all facets of the dairy industry — held outside of Tampa, Florida, early this month.

In response to requests for a 1986 forum for discussion, deliberation and debate, Dairy Forum chairman John F. Speer, President of the Forum's sponsoring organizations, the Milk Industry Foundation and the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, reiterated the need for a platform upon which to express differing viewpoints and further clarify positions.

"We are anxiously planning to continue looking at these 'issues of the day' from, at the minimum, two sides," noted Speer. "The overwhelming success of this year's Forum, as expressed by participants, strongly supports the necessity of and the good which stems from this type of dialogue."

The Forum addressed such diverse areas as dairy specific vs. flexible price supports, Class I differentials, impacts of supply controls on production, probable future regions of greatest and least milk supply, marketing barriers imposed by regulations, bovine hormones and embryo transplants and their effects on current national dairy policy, National Dairy Board promotional programs, casein imports and SNF levels in milks.

A Saturday morning breakfast session with Secretary of Agriculture Block headlined the closing day, followed by an insightful discussion of world and domestic agricultural priorities moderated by ABC News correspondent Sander Vanocur. Panelists Congressman E. "Kika" de la Garza (D-TX), Chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, Congressman Arland Stangeland (R-MN), member of the Committee on Agriculture and Secretary Block offered critical comments on world trade and export policies, domestic support levels, and the future of our national dairy industry.

Dates and locations of the spring 1986 U.S. Dairy Forum will be released shortly. Several hundred independent producers, cooperative leaders and processing and manufacturing CEO's are expected to attend.

African aid keeps USDA's food inspection team busy

WASHINGTON — The outpouring of U.S. food aid to drought-stricken African countries has kept the U.S. Department of Agriculture busy testing an unusually large volume of commodities to be shipped overseas as famine relief.

USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service tested 4.55 billion pounds of commodity grants for famine relief aid under the P.L. 480 program in the first six months of fiscal 1985 that ended in March — nearly the total tested and delivered in the entire previous year.

"The Department of Agirculture is proud to have a part in our country's response to the African food crisis," said Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block. "Thanks to the productive talent of our farmers and the dedication and hard work of our USDA employees, we are able to translate the generosity of the American spirit into the reality of sacks of grain."

Shipments of raw grains and processed commodities to more than 75 countries in the first six months of this fiscal year increased 65 percent over the same period last year — from 2.60 billion pounds in the first half of fiscal 1984 to 4.29 billion pounds in the first half of 1985, according to estimates from USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"The Federal Grain Inspection Service is making sure that shipments of wheat, sorghum, corn, and processed commodities to African countries hard-hit by severe drought and food shortages meet government specifications for quality, safety, wholesomeness, identity, and nutritional enrichment," said John Marshall, field management director for the Agency.

"The agency contracts with part-time samplers to collect processed commodity samples. These samplers have stepped up their work schedules from the usual two days per week to three days per week. When the Beltsville lab that does the testing is hard pressed, it diverts its overflow workload to a commercial lab in Omaha, Neb.," Marshall said.

The Agency is required by law to inspect and weigh most export raw grains, and provides inspection of processed commodities on request. Government food aid contracts usually require inspection of processed commodities, Marshall said.

The agency also inspects processed commodities for P.L. 480 concessional sales, defense contracts, school lunch and infant feeding programs, and commercial businesses.

U.S. food aid this year is going to 20 African countries that the Food and Agriculture Organization has identified as most seriously affected by the drought. U.S. aid shipments to five of the hardest hit of these countries will include 234,351 metric tons of bulgur (a form of crushed wheat) and 34,885 metric tons of soy-fortified sorghum grits to Ethiopia; 3,618 metric tons of corn soya meal to Kenya; 34,905 metric tons of rice and 678 metric tons of peas to Mozambique; 2,240 metric tons of nonfat dry milk to Niger; and 94,430 metric tons of wheat flour and 3,813 metric tons of vegetable oil to Sudan. U.S. aid to these countries will also include shipments of raw grains.

The Agency inspects other processed commodities going to drought-stricken African countries, including corn- soya- milk products, soy-fortified flours, soy flour, cornmeal, soya products and oils, nonfat dried milk, beans, peas, and lentils. Agency field offices at Omaha; Wichita; Portland; Kansas City; Plainview, Texas; Philadelphia; and Peoria, Illinois, handle the largest number of requests for inspection of processed commodities.

"All testing is done in accordance with the official methods of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists, American Association of Cereal Chemists, and American Oil Chemists Society," says Hank Ikeda, Beltsville FGIS Processed Commodity Testing Laboratory section head.

"Each inspection includes a series of physical and chemical tests — including tests for protein, moisture, ash, fat, crude fiber, pH, alpha amylase, and other factors. Some contracts require that flour show good baking performance and meet other specifications," said Ikeda.

Products may be analyzed for total microbial count of organisms such as salmonella and staphylococcus and for insect fragments that would make them unsanitary. The lab can determine content of some vitamins and minerals such as calcium and iron. During 1984 the Agency tested raw grain and processed commodity samples for the pesticide residues ethylene dibromide, carbon tetrachloride and methyl bromide.

Testing takes approximately 48 hours. Results are phoned to the originating office for certification. Products that do not meet contract specifications may be discounted or rejected by the buyer.

Because of the large volume of aid shipments, processed commodity inspections made by the Federal Grain Inspection Service over the 6-month fiscal period ending March 31, and increased from 12,009 in fiscal 1984 to 15,283 in fiscal 1985. Total processed commodity inspections in fiscfal 1984 were 22,051.

Cornell sets Biotech seminar June 23-27

ITHACA, NY – Recent advances in biotechnology in the plant sciences and their potential for application to plant breeding and to agribusiness will be explored in an international symposium at Cornell University, June 23-27.

To be staged in Statler Auditorium on campus, the conference is expected to have 500 to 600 participants from the United States and several other countries, including Australia, England, Germany, Hungary, and Japan.

The international symposium – "Biotechnology in Plant Science: Relevance to Agriculture in the Eighties" – is being organized by the Cornell Biotechnology Program, which promotes research in biotechnology with emphasis on molecular aspects of genetics and cell biology with applications to plant, animal, and cell production.

Milton Zaitlin, associate director of the Cornell Biotechnology Program, says that recent dramatic developments in biotechnology in the plant sciences have opened the possibilities for developing plants with enhanced genetic capacity to boost the production of food and fiber.

"This symposium," he points out, "will examine these advances on detail and explore the potential for applying the new technologies to plant breeding and to agribusiness. In addition, patent, environmental, and regulatory issues will be discussed."

A professor of plant pathology and an authority on virology in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, Zaitlin is co-chairman of the symposium program committee.

The program will feature 27 presentations in six plenary lecture sessions dealing with plant regeneration and genetic changes through tissue culture, large-scale tissue culture operations, plant transformation, genes for transformation, and plant molecular biology and agrichemicals.

In addition, the prospects of applying these new technologies to agriculture will be examined in two panel discussions – "Plant Molecular Biology and Agrichemicals" and "Agricultural Biotechnology and Industry."

A highlight of the program will be the presentation by Ralph W.F. Hardy, a visiting professor of life sciences at Cornell and president of BioTechnica International, a Boston-based biotechnology firm. Hardy will speak on "Biotechnology: Roles of University, Government, and Industry" at the banquet Monday, June 24.

Established in 1983, the Cornell Biotechnology Program is comprised of the New York State Center for Advanced Technology for Biotechnology at Cornell, which is supported by New York State, and the Cornell Biotechnology Institute, supported by several private corporations. The program sponsors a wide range of research projects in molecular biology and genetics.

Registration for the June symposium is scheduled from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m., Sunday, June 23, at the Statler Inn on campus. The opening session is scheduled to get under way at 9 a.m., Monday, June 24.

For more information about the program and registration materials, contact Sheila Huey, Baker Laboratory, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853-1301, or at (607) 256-2300.

Value of treating silage

By Dr. George F.W. Haenlein
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, DE. – Corn silage is notoriously low in protein. So, for years we've been experimenting here in the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station dairy herd with soybeans interplanted into corn fields. In the process, we've succeeded in increasing the protein content of our corn silage by about 25 percent. Some farmers also do this by planting soybean-sorghum mixtures.

Small grain silages can also be low in protein, depending on how late they're cut. One answer to this problem is to add anhydrous ammonia at the time of ensiling. But, will it pay?

Adding anhydrous ammonia when ensiling small grains, barley, rye, oats and wheat now, or corn or sorghum later in the season has several benefits. It will:

- Increase protein in the silage by up to 50 percent with respective savings in commercial grain fed.
- Increased silage digestibility by 10 percent.
- Decrease dry matter and energy losses by up to 10 percent.
- Inhibit mold development in silage–especially on surfaces of horizontal silos while they are being emptied.

Recent studies at Michigan on the economics of adding ammonia to forage silages, showed that 8 pounds of ammonia per ton of silage produced about 40 pounds of protein. This was equal to the protein in 90 pounds of soybean oil meal.

Not considering the energy value of the meal, the researchers calculated its protein value at $7.20. They also estimated the ammonia was worth $2.45 in increased digestibility and energy, based on the price of corn. As a mold inhibitor of comparable effectiveness to commercial preservatives, it was worth an additional $1.

The total benefit from adding 8 pounds of ammonia to a ton of silage in this study was $10.65, minus an application cost of $2.70, for a net savings of $7.95.

In separate studies at Michigan, Ohio State and Perdue universities, researchers have observed the effects of feeding ammonia-treated corn silages on a total of 60 cows. Results of this work show milk production increased by an average of 4.5 pounds per cow per day.

Feed intake was higher, milk protein current was higher, and fat content was about the same when performance on ammonia treated silage was compared to controls. Income over feed costs per cow per day was $7.33 for the ammonia treated silage fed cows, versus $6.02 for the control cows.

Anhydrous ammonia combines well with the moisture and organic acids of ensiling forages. So for good binding and recovery of the ammonia it's best to use forages of no more than 40 percent dry matter. Silage analyses 3 weeks or more after ensiling show ammonia binding especially well to lactic acid. Chop forages well because ammonia binds best at the cut surfaces. Add the ammonia to forages in a liquid form through a super-cooled cold-flo system.

I would advise trying ammonia treatment for silage or hay as well as for hay crops when they need improvement in digestibility, protein content and prevention of spoilage. And I would especially advise it for the upcoming corn silage. The potential benefits to be gained from use of anhydrous ammonia should interest more and more dairymen in these economically tight times.

Checklist for strawberry diseases

UNIVERSITY PARK – Large luscious berries, green vigorous plants...that's what we think of when strawberries are mentioned. Most strawberry fields in Pennsylvania are healthy and produce quality berries.

From time to time even healthy, well managed patches develop a problem.

After proper identification, the appropriate recommendations can be followed.

FOLIAGE DISEASES

LEAF SPOTS – We'll consider leaf spots as one group–SPOT, BLIGHT, BLOTCH.

In some instances leafspot diseases can cause large areas of the leaf to turn brown and die. It is only a problem if many leaves are affected. The total injury to the individual plant is not usually severe.

Sprays for the other strawberry diseases (Botrytis, Powdery Mildew) will often control the leafspot diseases.

POWDERY MILDEW – This disease can be a problem since severe infections can greatly weaken the plant making it more susceptible to other diseases like black root rot or weakening it so that it becomes more susceptible to winter injury.

The most obvious symptom is the uprolling of the leaf edges and thin white growth of mildew on the lower surface of the leaf.

If the infection is severe, the leaves may have purple edges. The disease occurs during periods of dry weather with high humidities.

FRUIT DISEASE

BOTRYTIS FRUIT ROT – The major fruit rot on strawberries in Pennsylvania. This disease is also known as grey mold.

The grey mold on berries is the fungus body and spores. Some things to remember about grey mold are:

- The fungus is always present–on plant debris, straw or rotted berries.
- Frost association–frost injured blossoms are more susceptible to infection.
- Environment, spacing and fertilization--are important to Botrytis epidemics. Wet conditions result in more infections and spread. If plants are not too dense or high and rows too wide, good air circulation will help plants to dry off faster resulting in fewer infections. Over fertilized plants are thick and tall and have poor air circulation through the foliage.
- Spraying is only part of Botrytis control.

PLANT WILT

Several very specific diseases can cause strawberry plants to wilt just before or at harvest.

RED STELE is a very serious root disease which can survive a long time in the soil. It can be spread into new areas with diseased plants.

Plants appear to have poor growth and may occur in low, wet areas of the field. Older leaves may turn yellow or red.

When dug, diseased plants may have 'rat-tailed' roots, that is, no root hairs. When split, the red stele is obvious in the center of the root. This is a positive identification for red stele.

To control red stele:

- Avoid infested fields.
- Good drainage–red stele is prompted in poorly drained soils.
- Use resistant varieties–will help but other controls must be considered.

BLACK ROOT ROT is a common disease during wet seasons. It often follows red stele infections. A complex of root problems are all called black root rot. It may be caused by fungi, nematodes, fertilizer imbalance, or improper pH.

Roots are smaller than normal. Main roots may be spotted with dark patches. Feeder roots are lacking. All or part of the main roots are dead. Cross section of dead root is black.

To control Black Root Rot·

- Planting stock–clean roots, don't plant strawberries with diseased roots.
- Soil–use good drainage and pH to prevent plant decline and weakening which will followed by disease.
- Mulch. Mulch helps prevent winter injury to the crown. Winter-injured plants develop root disease.

VERTICILLIUM WILT is caused by a fungus and is most active during cool weather.

Outer leaves wilt and dry at the margins. Leaves become dark brown, and few new leaves develop.

Plants appear to be dry and flattened Severely affected plants may collapse just before harvest.

When split, crown and roots appear healthy.

The only positive method of diagnosis is isolation of the fungus in the laboratory. To control verticillium wilt, use:

- Crop rotation. If verticillium wilt is a problem, rotate with a crop other than tomatoes, peppers or potatoes for two years.
- Resistant varieties is good prevention.
- Soil fumigation–very effective but also expensive.

WINTER INJURY is not a disease but will cause plants to wilt.

Split the crown, if it is brown rather than cream colored, winter injury is likely.

Although disease diagnosis is never easy, a systematic approach to identification makes it possible. Strawberries are too profitable to allow an unidentified problem to reduce yield and the return to you.

Study urges added trade, food-aid use of soybeans

WASHINGTON – Expanding soybean oil exports under the U.S. Food-for-Peace Program would create additional demand benefiting not only the U.S. soybean industry, but also the nation's depressed farm economy and the economics of developing countries. That is the message of a White Paper released by the American Soybean Association (ASA) and the National Soybean Processors Association (NSPA).

"Help Solve the Farm Financial Crisis: Double Food-for-Peace Soybean Oil Exports" is the title of the joint ASA/NSPA study. In releasing the study, Donald H. Leavenworth, NSPA Chairman, stated that "ASA and NSPA believe that increased allocations of soybean oil in P.L. 480 programs can provide the greatest additional new demand and resultant benefits to American farmers in the U.S. soybean complex."

ASA President Roger Asendorf, elaborating on the joint ASA/NSPA conclusions, outlined numerous benefits of expanded P.L. 480 soybean oil exports:

* "An expanded P.L. 480 program should increase soybean prices substantially between 1985 and 1990, according to an April 1984 study conducted by the Congressional Research Service. They estimate almost $1 billion more in farm income alone – a benefit not to be understated at this time of serious financial crisis on the American farm.

* "Such an expansion would stimulate the depressed U.S. soybean industry, create a substantial multiplier effect on gross national product (GNP) and result in increased employment and income as well as more tax revenues to the government.

* "A better nutritional balance to U.S. food assistance efforts would be achieved in areas of world famine such as sub-Sabaran Africa, where lack of adequate daily calorie intake is the number one need.

* "Expanded economic development in beneficiary countries would occur through local currency-generating concessional sales. The P.L. 480 record clearly shows that, in the long-term, such expanded economic development stimulates additional commercial demand for U.S. agricultural exports.

NSPA Chairman Leavenworth noted that the President's Task Force on International Private Enterprise fully recognized the benefits of an expanded P.L. 480 program in its December 1984 final report. "One of the Task Force's primary recommendations was that the the P.L. 480 Food-for-Peace Program be at least doubled to help avert starvation, alleviate poverty and malnutrition and to expand developing country agricultural markets and support private sector growth."

ASA President Asendorf further elaborated, stressed that "ASA and NSPA fully endorse the Task Force's conclusion and further recommend that a P.L. 480 Program which is doubled in size should in turn at least double Title 1 and Title 11 allocations for soybean oil. Initial outlays for soybean oil purchases would be more than offset in the short run by federal farm program savings for feed grain price and income supports, and in the long run by improved federal tax revenues."

Copies of the ASA/NSPA White Paper may be obtained by contacting the NSPA offices.

Gain the benefits of Pennsylvania Holstein Assoc. membership

STATE COLLEGE — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association is encouraging Holstein breeders from across the state to join the Association and realize the benefits of membership.

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association, with its 6000 members in 50 local clubs, actively supports the Commonwealth's largest agricultural sector — dairy farming.

The Association has three main objectives: to furnish individual service to owners of Holstein cattle; to conduct a progam of breed promotion and education for all ages; and to provide a means for members to market their product.

The 50 local clubs sponsor many annual events, including educational meetings, field days, barn meetings, tours, picnics, and annual meetings. Topics such as breeding, feeding, classification, embryo transfers, to name a few, are discussed at these informal gatherings.

The PHA's show program consists of two state shows, five regional shows and over 25 local exhibitions.

The Association also offers a valuable sales service. The Association is involved in exporting both males and females, and Pennsylvania cattle can now be found in 44 countries.

Consignment sales managed by the Association offer high-quality registered Holsteins. The PHA is also active in co-managing partial and complete herd dispersals.

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association welcomes new members. The minimum membership fee is $20, with an additional fee of 45 cents per registered Holstein cow owned by the member. Those who are also national members soon regain that investment per cow because of the $6 per animal savings in registration fees.

If you are interested in joining the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, write for a membership application to: Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College, PA 16801. Or for more information call 814-234-0364.

Export incentive plan

Also reported was S. 1040, as amended, a bill to require the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out an export program using Commodity Credit Corporation stocks to expand export sales of U.S. agriculutural products and to broaden the intermediate credit program to include credit quarantees.

"Today's action by the Committee is necessary in order to provide important export help to farmers this year," said Chairman Jesse Helms. "The combination of these bills will give the Secretary of Agriculture the additional tools necessary to see that U.S. agricultural products can be sold in the world market this year.

"Now that this near-term assistance has been acted on, the Committee can turn its attention to writing a long-term export program that will ensure the continued competitiveness of U.S. farmers."

Meanwhile, a House Agriculture subcommittee headed by Rep. Berkley Bedell (D-Iowa), approved a legislative package designed to reverse the slide in farm exports.

(Insert Committee Okays Bill story, deleting the first paragraph).

The legislation, approved by the Subcommittee on Department Operations, Research, and Foreign Agriculture on a roll call vote of 13 to 0, will go next to the full House Agriculture Committee for consideration as a section of the Food Security Act of 1985, a long-range omnibus farm and food bill sponsored by Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex.

The trade and overseas food aid section of the bill, as adopted by the subcommittee, includes:

- A requirement that for the 1985 through 1989 crop years, the Secretary of Agriculture must develop a payment-in-kind export assistance program under which government-owned surplus crops ar provided in appropriate cases to encourage expansion of farm exports.
- A directive to the Secretary, in coordination with the Special Trade Representative, to seek multilateral consultations to reduce the need for export subsidies and to reduce the likelihood of a farm commodity trade war.
- A mandate to provide government guarantees for not less than $5 billion in commercial short-term export credits in fiscal 1986, plus not less than $325 million in direct export loans which are used to build larger "blended credit" export deals.
- A provision keeping blended credit export sales free of a cost-boosting "cargo preference" regulation.
- A section broadening existing authority for intermediate (3-10 year) export loans and a five-year extension of authority for creating an export credit revolving fund.
- A five-year extension of the Food for Peace Program, plus steps toward better use of American food to aid the needy abroad.

Bedell said, "These new and extended authorities, which will be subject to review and further consideration in the full Committee, amount to a strong statement that we must take vigorous steps to maintain and rebuild our export markets. Our action says, among other things, that we do not want the American farmer victimized by export subsidy and other programs operated by our competitors, and we are providing tools to counter unfair competition."

Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kans., Ranking Minority Member of the subcommittee, said, "I think this bill is a positive step in addressing the sagging export picture that U.S. farmers are facing. This bill reflects Congressional frustration over declining export sales and the recent refusal by the French to even meet and discuss trade issues. This bill will go a long way toward addressing some of the unfair trading practices that U.S. farmers have faced."

The subcommittee legislation was built around the export section of Chairman de la Garza's Food Security Act, modified and expanded by amendments from Bedell, Roberts, and Reps. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa, and Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Highlights of the legislation include:

EXPORT EXPANSION

Under this section, the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to carry out a program under which commodities acquired by his department are "provided to United States exporters, processors, and foreign purchasers, at no cost or reduced cost, to encourage the development and expansion of export markets..."

The commodity export assistance could be used for purposes including countering subsidies paid by other nations, compensating for the high value of the dollar, barter, or any other comparable purpose which the Secretary of Agriculture finds appropriate for expanding farm exports.

Among other points, the bill also provides that the program should include traditional customers who buy increased amounts of American products, and should be operated to "encourage increased use and avoid displacing usual marketings" of U.S. products. An Advisory Council would be created to advise on operation of the program.

EXPORT CREDIT

The bill requires the Secretary of Agriculture to use $325 million in Commodity Credit Corp. funds in fiscal 1986 for direct exports credits in connection with "blended credit" export programs.

Also, the bill requires fiscal 1986 guarantees of not less than $5 billion in short-term (up to three years) export credits, and an amendment forbids the Secretary to raise the current credit origination fee (one-third of one percent) on credit guarantees. (The adminstration had proposed a five percent fee.)

The bill also broadens an existing program of loans for intermediate-term (three to 10 year) export credits. At present, these loans can be used only for specified, limited purposes, but the bill would also cover the general purpose of promoting farm exports and would authorize guarantees as well as direct loans.

Additionally, the Secretary would be permitted to accept up to 10 percent of repayments in foreign currencies which could be used for developing U.S. export markets. The Secretary would be told to make at least $500 million a year available in the intermediate credit program.

Further, the bill extends authority for creation of an agricultural export credit revolving fund through fiscal 1990.

CARGO PREFERENCE

The bill states that Agriculture Department export financing programs will not be subject to cargo preference (a requirement that half of specified cargoes must be shipped on U.S.-flag vessels) except to the extent otherwise required under the Food for Peace Law.

The bill is designed to restrict use of the cargo preference rule to the types of cases in which it was enforced prior to a recent federal district court decision. (If the amendment becomes law, "blended credit" and export PIK programs would not be subject to subject to cargo perference.)

Supporters of the amendment said it was not aimed at hurting the U.S. maritime industry but at preventing further roadblocks to U.S. farm exports.

FOOD FOR PEACE

The legislation provides a five-year extension, through fiscal 1990, of funding authority for Public Law 480, the Food For Peace program, with the authorization for Title II (grant) programs law raised to $1.2 billion annually compared with the current $1 billion ceiling.

The bill also includes provisions under which private voluntary agencies distributing U.S. food abroad could sell part of the food donated by the Agriculture Department to help cover the cost of distribution within host countries. Further, the bill extends for five years authority for replenishing, when necessary, the government's international emergency wheat reserve.

OTHER PROVISIONS

The Secretary would be directed to intensify, within available funds, research programs aimed at developing technology to overcome export barriers, including studies on how to meet foreign plant quarantine requirements and improved transportation and handling of perishable commodities.

House Committee approves bill postponing wheat vote

WASHINGTON — The House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill (H.R. 1614) directing the Secretary of Agriculture to postpone a scheduled July 19-26 farmer referendum on wheat marketing quotas for 1986, Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., announced.

De la Garza said he plans to seek early House action on the bill, which was approved by a voice vote.

Agriculture Secretary John Block recently announced plans to hold the referendum because it would be required by August 1 under the terms of an old permanent law which is currently suspended but which would come back into operation for 1986 if Congress fails to pass new farm legislation this year.

The old wheat price support and production control system has been suspended, though not repealed, by a succession of farm laws including the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 which expires with the 1985 crop season. The Agriculture Committee bill postpones the referendum until 30 days after the end of the 1985 session of Congress, providing time for enactment of new legislation which would supersede the permanent law.

Wheat growers voting in the referendum would decide whether to accept a 1986 program with a national acreage allotment of 54 million acres—substantially below current production levels. Agriculture Department officials said voting in the referendum would be restricted to farmers who held allotments in 1977.

"In both the House and Senate, Agriculture Committees are working on omnibus farm legislation including a new wheat program for 1986 and future crops," de la Garza pointed out. "Because this new program will replace the out-of-date provisions which would be the subject of the July referendum, it makes sense to delay a costly referendum on a program that is out of date and would likely be rejected by farmers."

The Subcommittee on Wheat, Soybeans and Feed Grains earlier had approved a version of the measure giving the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary authority to postpone the referendum. Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., Chairman of the subcommittee and chief sponsor of the bill, said he believe the referendum would not serve a good purpose for farmers under current conditions, and supported a motion by Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kans., to make the postponement mandatory.

Foley said the measure has bipartisan support and is similar to action taken four years ago. In 1981, while Congress was working on what became that year's omnibus farm bill, the referendum was postponed by law until after the new farm program had been passed, Foley noted.

Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., Ranking Minority Member of the Wheat, Soybeans, and Feed Grains Subcommittee, said, "The referendum would be a needless waste of money that would be particularly confusing and frustrating for those on the county level. What the Committee did today was to requi[illegible] Secretary Block to avoid the referendum's unnecessary expense, frustration and confusion."

Farmers voting in the currently scheduled July referendum would be those holding wheat acreage allotments which were last calculated in 1977. If two-thirds of the producers voting approve the control program, it would take effect and any farmers exceeding their acreage allotments would face cash marketing penalties.

If the program failed to win approval in the referendum and if no new wheat legislation were enacted, the price support loan rate would be set at 50 percent of parity and loans at that level would be available only to producers who voluntarily complied with the planting allotment No penalties would be applied for excess production.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO PORK PRODUCERS AND ALLIED INDUSTRIES

Dear Pennsylvania Pork Producers and Allied Industries,

The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue has issued a ruling declaring sales tax is due on all types of slotted pig flooring (woven wire, expanded metal, etc.) used in pig production.

The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue has completed a Pennsylvania sales tax audit of our company. They have assessed our company with sales tax and penalty on all flooring sold since January 1, 1982*. They have also requested and received the names and addresses of all customer who have purchased grating since January 1, 1982*, who have farm use tax exempt certificates on file with our company. These customers will be receiving a sales tax and penalty assessment.

The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue will be doing a Pennsylvania sales tax audit on all Pennsylvania companies marketing pig flooring in the near future to assess sales tax on pig grating sold since January 1, 1982.

Our company and other industry representatives feel this is an unfair ruling and will create an additional production cost for the pig industry. We feel therefore, this tax assessment of pig grating should be appealed on a statewide industry basis. Our company has until June 12, 1985 to file a notice of intent to appeal with appeals board.

Our company is asking the following organizations to assist and fund this appeal.

PA Farmers Association
Penn Ag Industries
PA Pork Producers Council

A reply from these organizations in the immediate future is requested. A decision as an industry needs to be made as soon as possible. Without assistance from the industry, our company does not wish to fund the appeal and would not appeal the ruling.

Our company is asking you as a producer or allied industry person to contact these organizations in the next ten days requesting them to support this appeal effort for the Pennsylvania pig industry.

Sincerely,

Leon Hoover, President

New bill would fund study of natural soil methods

WASHINGTON – The House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill (H.R. 1383) authorizing the use of research and Extension education on soil and energy-conserving and organic farming systems which could cut farm production costs and conserve natural resources.

The bill was approved by a roll call vote of 25 to 15, Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., announced.

The legislation was sponsored by Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., and 42 other House members and is similar to a measure which passed the House last year but was not acted on in the Senate. The bill would direct the Agriculture Department to establish–with the cooperation of willing farmers and/or state and federal research stations–research projects needed to obtain data on production systems which can improve productivity while protecting the land and conserving energy.

These projects would collect and analyze information on what happens when various types of farm switch from energy-intensive farming to systems relying on legumes and other sod-based crop rotations, the use of crop residues and natural manures, and production practices such as conservation tillage and non-chemical pest controls.

Other provisions of the bill include a directive to the Secretary of Agriculture to make the information drawn from the new studies available to the public. The bill notes that in order to evaluate a production system, "it is recognized that a minimum of 12 projects and associated component studies are needed."

Funding for the federal costs involved in the studies would be determined by Congress at a later date. Weaver said rough estimates from Agriculture Department experts put the cost of the programs at $7.2 million over five years.

Weaver said the research and extension programs authorized under his bill would be designed to help find "workable solutions" to cut farm costs and help restore farm profits while controlling erosion. He said the programs "do not single out one particular kind of farming; rather they examine a broad range of technologies which will benefit all farmers."

Co-op eyes Clover Packing

by step, there were mixed reactions. "I'm surprised it's held up this well," Clarence Seaman of Dauphin County said. Another farmer countered, "It still needs a lot of work. And money."

The plant once processed 175 to 200 head of cattle a day and had locker capacity for 300 head. Despite sitting empty for several years, there are few major problems with the plant. Two ceilings would have to be replaced and some floor cracks repaired. The most expensive requirement will be a new sewage treatment facility, price unknown. The slaughterhouse itself has been appraised at $961,000 and carries a purchase price of $800,000.

Adjacent to the slaughter house is a nursing home (which the co-op may use as storage or office space), three houses, and a total of eight acres of land. The entire property, including the slaughterhouse, was appraised at $1.25 million.

In a meeting that followed the tour, BMDC members explained that they expected to be able to purchase the complete property for $1 million and expected to need an additional half-million dollars in improvements.

Although interest was high, only a few signed on the dotted line. The signup met the expectations of the organizers, however.

Over coffee and apple fritters at the Dutch Pantry, Charles Rine of Montour County commented, "The big question is how much money do they want from us?"

The answer: $1,000 apiece, plus a one-time stockyard fee. The thousand dollars would purchase a share of common stock and would make the farmer a voting member of the coopperative, also sharing in the profits. The stockyard fee would be sold as commodity stock, based on the number of cattle the farmer plans to ship. BMDC members point out that the commodity stock funds would be set aside, as an emergency reserve fund. The common stock funds would be used to pay startup costs.

The co-op will also sell preferred stock to non-members who can profit from the venture. But the majority of the project's financing is expected to come from the sale of tax-exempt revenue bonds, as well as from a subsequent line of credit to be established.

The farmers were attentive as a number of speakers from PACMA and the BMDC explained their rationale, the need to create a cooperative marketing effort with farmers working together to get the best profit directly from the market.

"Economics is the biggest problem down on the farm," said Marvin Miller, PACMA manager. "When you come to sell your product, you do it for whatever someone is willing to give you." He noted that farmers need to control their market instead of leaving that control up to a middleman.

Gene Eisenbise spoke briefly about the efforts area pork producers had made to form a cooperative association and purchase a working plant in nearby Shamokin. Although the Shamokin pork processing operation expects to be ready in July or August, many of the beef producers were unconvinced by the example.

"That was a working plant," said Bob Pardoe, Jr., of Northumberland County. "We're talking about a different situation here. Here you're going from zero. Nothing is in place yet. The venture isn't proven, and there's a lot of room for questions about how well it will work."

Several veal producers in the group were equally skeptical. "You don't know who we are," one said doubtingly to a BMDC speaker. In response, Royal Palmer of PACMA shot back, "You're a New York-New England market. Limited. Ethnic." He rattled off the names of major wholesalers and followed up with the negative responses he'd received from several of them who were disturbed about the potential of growers' cooperative dealing in the marketplace.

Royal Palmer from PACMA talks to beef producers about the value of a co-op.

"You know more about it than I thought you did," the grower admitted out loud. Some of the tension in the room broke with the laughter that followed.

When the night was over, the clock showed almost 11 p.m. The room was too warm; some of the farmers hadn't had dinner yet. But they didn't leave. Only a handful came forward to sign up for the co-op; most of the rest lingered to talk, to consider, to weigh what they'd heard.

A dozen growers signed up that night. Most of them were large producers concerned about their dwindling profit in the marketplace. Others were more reluctant. "I'm not sure it would do that much for me," a Snyder County farmer said, citing his comfortable business with private customers.

Still others, some of them the most outspoken during the meeting, admitted that they were still interested but wanted to see more progress from the committee before getting involved. One strong motivator to every farmer in the room was a statement made by Howard Goss of PACMA: "Once the plant is at capacity, we expect to be limited to processing only co-op members' beef."

The morning after the meeting dawned chilly and gray, but BMDC and PACMA people awoke pleased. They'd received a commitment from almost 20% of the farmers present, and an equal or larger percentage had potential for joining in the near future. The turnout, with cooperation from word of mouth and poor weather for planting, was almost double what the committee had anticipated. The response was enough to make them sure they wanted to go ahead with plans for the co-op.

Committee member Larry Yarger of Snyder County summed it up saying, "I feel comfortable that we're going to make it work... We have to make it work."

Benefit concert to aid new Farm Defense Fund

WASHINGTON — Documents incorporating the Family Farm Defense Fund, a national legal assistance group organized to help debt-burdened family farmers, were filed today on behalf of the presidents of three national farm organizations.

The documents were signed May 7 by Sidney Beck, president of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE), Cy Carpenter, president of the National Farmers Union, and DeVon Woodland, president of the National Farmers Organization. They were filed with the superintendent of corporations in the Washington, D.C. recorder of deed's office.

The formal organization meeting of the legal assistance group is scheduled to follow a family farm benefit concert at the Civic Auditorium in Omaha on June 2. Country singer John Conlee is presenting the concert, and all proceeds will go to the Family Farm Defense Fund.

The document lists the fund's purposes as initiating ligitation on behalf of family farmers and ranchers, providing specialized advice to attorneys handling problems of farmers and ranchers, and conducting studies and preparing reports on the family farm system of agriculture.

NFU's Carpenter said family farmers are in deep economic trouble and need legal protection for themselves, their families, and their farming businesses. The help and support needed, he said, has to come from sources beyond their own operations.

"The Family Farm Defense Fund will facilitate referrals for legal assistance, counseling and other services that can be extremely helpful," Carpenter said.

"Polls show that more urban people are showing support for farming families and a deeper understanding of the current economic depression in rural America. We want to provide the urban people that these urban people already have access to," Carpenter said.

Woodland said the fund would be able to finance court action and sue any agency or institution that deprives farm and ranch families of credit or other legal rights.

"It is patterned after highly successful legal assistance groups like the Environmental Defense Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council," the NFO president explained. "We don't have anything like that for family agriculture and we badly need it."

Beck said more and more farm families are seeking help from farm crisis centers, hotline groups, and others providing services such as counseling, financial advice, and stress seminars.

"Reports from those working with these families suggest a growing need for legal advice and assistance," she said. "We need to do whatever is necessary to protect their rights, including taking federal agencies and lending institutions to court. The Family Farm Defense Fund provides an efective way to do that."

Conlee, who has twice been nominated for Country Music Association Vocalist of the Year, initiated the benefit concert and encouraged the farm leaders to set up the defense fund. He has had hit records every year since 1978. His latest, "The Working Man," moved up to number nine on the country music charts last week.

The benefit concert will begin at 2:30 p.m. June 2 at the Civic Auditorium, 1804 Capitol, Omaha, NB. All tickets are general admission and cost $10. They can be ordered from the Civic Auditorium or by calling the auditorium at 402-346-1323; from Nebraska Farmers Union, P.O. Box 2667, Lincoln, Neb. 68502; or may be charged by phone through Brandeis Stores in Omaha, 402-449-7000. They will also be made available through several of the sponsoring organizations.

Committee votes to extend EPA's pesticide programs

WASHINGTON — The House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill extending funding authority for the Environmental Protection Agency's pesticide control programs through the 1986 fiscal year which begins Oct. 1, Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, Tex., announced.

The bill, H.R..2355, was approved by voice vote and authorizes appropriations of $68.6 million for Environmental Protection Agency pesticide control and research programs, including $11.993 million for research. It was sponsored by Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Department Operations, Research and Foreign Agriculture which approved the measure earlier, and by Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kans., Ranking Minority Member of the subcommittee. The funding total is unchanged from the current fiscal year.

De la Garza noted that Subcommittee Chairman Bedell and Rep. Roberts have indicated they hope to get subcommittee consideration later on a broader pesticide bill. This would—in addition to simply extending the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act as H.R. 2355 does -- also include a number of substantive changes in pesticide programs covered in the law.

"If the subcommittee is able to bring us a more comprehensive bill, our intent is to move it to the House floor in place of the provisions of H.R. 2355," de la Garza explained.

Bedell noted that the subcommittee has scheduled public hearings on pesticide act revisions for May 20 and 21.

Dairy Policy Options for 1985

Government Programs to Increase Consumption

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ninth in a series of nine articles about dairy policy options for 1985. Compiled by Jack Kirkland and Blair Smith, Extension ag economists at Penn State, the articles are written by a variety of national authorities on dairy policy issues.

We are printing these articles to help you better understand and evaluate the policies and programs the dairy industry faces, and to help you take a more effective stand for the program you choose to support as the 1985 Farm Bill is formulated.

BY ANDREW NOVAKOVIC
Cornell University

The most pleasant solution to a problem of surplus milk and dairy products surely occurs when demand increases. Thus, many dairy farm groups have called for programs that would in one way or another increase the demand for or use of milk.

This article reviews how some of these demand expansion programs work and evaluates their success.

Alternative Methods for Increasing Consumption

Among proposals to increase consumption are methods for expanding existing food assistance programs and new policies to expand exports. Another approach that has received the most attention and which was expanded under the 1983 Dairy Production Stabilization Act is farmer-financed promotion.

Conditions Fostering a Need for Increasing Consumption

According to USDA data, U.S. domestic, civilian disappearance of milk on a fat solids basis (total civilian disappearance from commercial sources plus milk consumed on farms) from 1970 to 1983 has increased almost 15 percent. This measure excludes military use, exports, and food obtained through federal programs.

The long-run increase in dairy product consumption seems to be primarily due to population changes, at least until 1981. From 1970 to 1980, per capita consumption average 510.5 pounds; from 1981 to 1983, average per capita consumption rose to 518.7 pounds.

Not all dairy products have shared equally in the increase in consumption. Cheese, lowfat milk, and frozen products consumption has increased the most, while consumption of whole milk, butter, and other manufactured products has declined.

Fluid milk products sales – down from 52 billion pounds in 1970 to an estimated 49.7 billion pounds in 1983 – caused the greatest concern This four percent drop in total sales is due to an 18 percent decline in per capita sales.

This becomes even more significant given that about 85 percent of all dairy farmers are paid under a classified pricing plan that places a higher price on milk used to produce fluid products. Thus, much of the expansion effort, especially promotion programs, has focused on increasing sales of fluid milk products.

Milk Promotion and Related Programs

Several key issues have emerged over the 70-year history of farmer-financed promotion programs. How should such programs be financed? In other words, who contributes – farmers, processors, others? Are payments in support of these programs voluntary or mandatory, and how much of a payment should be made?

Another major question is, how should the money be spent? Should the focus be on specific products or type of activity? Promotion efforts can include media advertising, point-of-purchase advertising, market research, nutrition education, and so forth. It could concentrate on generic advertising only or include brand advertising.

A third important concern is how programs are administered. For example, to what extent, if any does the government which authorizes a program get involved in administering it, and should these programs be administered at a local (states or regions) or a national level?

The fourth and perhaps most difficult question is, are these programs cost effective or can they be?

Authorization to collect money from farmers may come through federal marketing orders, state marketing orders or specific taxes, or private cooperative plans. Assessments may be voluntary or mandatory. Prior to 1983, assessments on local program participants ranged from two cents per cwt. of milk sold to 1.1 percent of gross farm income from milk.

The 1983 Dairy Production Stabilization Act required all producers to contibute 15 cents per cwt. to a new National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, with a credit of up to 10 cents per cwt. for contributions to local programs.

Although it is now mandatory, the national program must be put up for referendum in August or September 1985. If a majority of the voting farmers approve it, the national program can continue and participation will likely remain mandatory.

There are relatively few third party studies of the effectiveness of milk promotion or the other key issues. USDA case studies indicate that generic media advertising can increase sales of fluid milk, cheese, and butter. A series of Cornell University studies of generic milk promotion in New York indicate that media advertising has increased sales of fluid milk resulting in higher returns to state farmers.

Although such studies show that media advertising can increase sales, many questions remain unanswered. For example the New York experience indicates that after a point, more promotion does not pay.

The optimal level of spending varies from market to market and from one part of the year to another. Returns to advertising appear to be much higher in large urban areas than in smaller cities and rural areas, and the response is greater in the winter than in the summer.

Promotion and other studies also indicate that demographic factors are very important in explaining differences in household or individual consumption levels.

The implications of this for a promotion strategy have not been rigorously explored. Very little research has been done on the effectiveness of alternative milk promotion strategies in general.

Although media advertising can increase sales, it is not known what types of advertisements or what media are most effective. Some studies indicate that couponing and point-of-purchase advertising are effective, but they have not been thoroughly studied or compared with media advertising.

Similarly, a few available comparisons of the benefits to farmers of generic versus branded advertising have produced mixed results. Apparently generic advertising is more effective for some products than for others.

Even less is known about the returns to producers from farmer-financed product and market research or nutrition education programs. The bottom line suggests that some promotion programs have improved returns to farmers, but many specific questions about how to maximize those returns have yet to be answered.

Food Assistance and Other Consumption Subsidies

One way to increase consumption is to subsidize it. In the U.S , this has typically been done through domestic or international food assistance programs. Such programs include School Lunch; Special Milk; Food Stamps; Women, Infants and Children; product donations; and Food for Peace (P.L. 480).

Broader programs to subsidize domestic consumption in general are not used in Western countries; however, many Western dairy exporting countries do subsidize their exports in some fashion. With subsidy programs consumers benefit from lower prices and farmers benefit from higher sales financed by taxpayers.

Food aid programs enjoy much support among producers and have often been initiated in periods of surplus farm production. On the other hand, the continuation of these programs depends on supporters outside the farm community, among those having primarily humanitarian objectives.

The latter also provide a balance to the administration and operation of food aid programs, it is not always clear where social welfare goals stop and farm support goals begin.

Subsidy of exports also has been advocated by some dairy farm groups. Prices of manufactured dairy products in world trade generally are 30 to 50 percent of U.S. prices. While proposals to increase export sales generally are not presented in the context of price subsidies, it seems clear that a significant increase in U.S. dairy exports could occur only if export prices could be reduced.

Given attitudes toward similar domestic subsidies and the likely negative repercussions from our trading partners, it seems unlikely that government will approve subsidies solely to benefit the dairy industry.

Local government must play new role in rural growth

HERTFORD, N.C. – The federal role in rural development has changed forever, and state and local officials must adjust to less federal control, more local responsibility and greater involvement of the private sector in development efforts.

This was the message delivered to the monthly meeting of the Albemarle Commission by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's rural development policy director, Willard "Bill" Phillips, Jr. the Albemarle Commission (formerly the Albemarle Regional Planning and Development Commission) is comprised of twenty-four local governments of northeast North Carolina involved in rural improvement.

"The days of endless federal funds are at an end," Phillips told the Commission, "but the extraordinary investment which those funds represent – in rural roads, health and environmental treatment centers, schools, dams, libraries, industrial parks and other development necessities – is a strong foundation on which the future of rural America can be built."

Phillips said local and state officials must "make the most of this endowment we've been given, and build the future with brains and enterprise rather than just bricks and mortar."

The physical infrastructure of rural America is "in need of some repair," Phillips said, "but while fifty years of federal spending has helped but that infrastructure in place, it's time we wrote the next chapter of the rural development story–the chapter on new jobs, new businesses and new opportunities."

"The federal government cannot be the sole, or even the principal, author of this new chapter," he said, "but we can help you make history yourselves, and we will."

Phillips said federal programs have helped point the way toward this new approach to rural development.

"We learned the value of partnerships between various levels of government, and between government and private enterprise," he said. "We learned the value of financial leveraging, of making one dollar do the work of ten. And from every federal development program of the last fifty years, we have learned that Washington doesn't always know best."

Phillips said the "best thing the federal government can do for rural America today is to reform the federal tax code, reduce the federal deficit and rebuild the national economy. We're doing these things, and the people of rural America have shown that you can do the rest."

He cited growing trends of rural business enterpreneurship, technological innovation and public-private partnerships as evidence of "the new chapter in rural development you're writing today."

Dam failure booklet

HARRISBURG – Important emergency information for Pennsylvanians who live downstream from a dam is now available at county emergency management agency offices throughout the Commonwealth.

Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency has published 50,000 copies of an informative booklet, "If the Dam Should Fail." This flier indicates the number of hazardous dams, by county, and suggests actions which should be taken in event of dam failure.

Seven hundred forty-nine of Pennsylvania's 2,500 dams are considered "high hazard." Heavy rains or soil erosion could cause these dams to fail. In case of dam failure, every second counts.

For a copy of this important flier, contact the county emergency management agency

New varieties certified

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued certificates of protection for 13 new varieties of barley, bean, perennial ryegrass, soybeans and tomato. Also, one variety of cotton is being reissued.

Kenneth H. Evans, of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said developers of the new varieties will have the exclusive right to reproduce their products in the United States for 18 years. Certificates of protection are granted after a review of the breeders' records and claims that each new variety is novel, uniform and stable.

The barley varieties being protected are WestBred 501. Columbia and WestBred Gustoe, developed by Western Plant Breeders, Inc., Phoenix, Ariz.

The newly protected bean varieties are Ovation, developed by Royal Sluis, Enkhuizen, Holland; and Bush Kentucky Wonder 125, developed by Musser Seed Co., Inc., Twin Falls, Idaho.

Delray is the perennial ryegrass being protected. It was developed by Northrup King Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

The newly protected soybean varieties are Dawson, developed by Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, St. Paul, Minn.; HT5203 and HT4203, developed by Stanford Seed Company, Buffalo, N.Y.; and 9441, 9292 and 9271, developed by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., Des Moines, Iowa.

Campbell Soup Company--Campbell Institute for Research & Technology, Napoleon, Ohio, developed Easy Harvest, the newly protected tomato variety.

PR 80 cotton is being reissued at this time to show a change in ownership from Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., to Rosebud Cottonseed Treating Co., Inc., Rosebud, Texas.

Westbred 501, Columbia and Westbred Gustoe barley, Dawson HT5203 and HT4203 soybean, and the reissued PR 80 cotton variety all are being issued under Title V, to be sold by variety name only as a class of certified seed, Evans said.

Scout seedling corn for cutworms, beetles, slugs

NEWARK, DE – Seedling corn plants are subject to damage from a number of insects, including black cutworms, flea beetles and slugs, all of which are active now.

Each produces a characteristic type and amount of injury, so it is important to know which one is causing damage before making a control decision.

University of Delaware extension pest management specialist Joanne Whalen advises farmers to be alert for signs of all three pests.

Black cutworm

According to Whalen, black cutworm outbreaks don't occur every year, but if detected too late, this insect can quickly cause economic damage.

"A single cutworm can cut up to four or five plants during its lifetime for an average yield loss of 45 bushels of corn per acre," she warns. "So identify cutworms while they're small and easy to control."

Outbreaks are most likely to occur under the following field conditions:

- no-till corn planted into soybean or corn stubble;
- fields that are poorly drained;
- late-planted fields;
- fields where broadleaf weed growth (especially chickweed) was present prior to spring tillage or planting.

Heavily infested fields are most vulnerable from plant emergence through the first-leaf stage. Since cutworm egg laying occurs over a long period, scout untreated fields as well as those which were treated at planting, the specialist advises.

Start looking for leaf feeding and cut plants on a weekly basis as soon as plants emerge. Continue to scout until the fifth-leaf stage. Base treatment decisions on a random sample of 20 consecutive plants in five locations throughout a field.

"Be sure to dig around the base of the plants for live larvae," Whalen says. "In general, we recommend an insecticide treatment when 3 percent or more of the plants are cut, and you find two or more larvae per 100 plants."

Cutworms more than 1½ inches long are almost through feeding. They're also harder to kill, so there's no point in treating for them.

Slugs

If ragged holes appear on the lower parts of corn seedlings or if the whorls of small plants are cut off, look for slugs resting under surface trash and decaying vegetation. Slug damage is similar to that of young cutworms, but they leave a characteristic slimy, silver-colored trail wherever they go.

Expect to find slug outbreaks under the following conditions: cool, wet spring weather; heavy cornstalk, rye, or weed residues; or fields with a history of slug damage.

"If we continue to have dry weather this spring, most fields should escape economic infestations," Whalen predicts. "Actively growing plants and corn more than 6 inches tall are less susceptible to slug damage."

Research at the University of Maryland has shown that populations of up to 16 slugs per plant introduced at the three- to four-leaf stage can cause up to 50 percent defoliation in corn without significantly reducing yield.

Even so, Whalen advises farmers to check fields for slug damage if conditions favor an outbreak. If five or more slugs are found around each plant up to the three-leaf stage, she recommends treatment–especially when there are signs of damage, plant growth is slow, and cool, wet conditions persist.

Flea beetle

While scouting corn seedlings for cutworms and slugs, farmers may also find signs of flea beetle activity. These tiny black beetles cause feeding damage and also spread the bacterial disease, Stewarts Wilt.

Feeding injury appears as longitudinal stripes which give plants a silvery appearance. High populations are associated with mild winters, so populations could be above average this year.

"Since most field corn hybrids are resistant to Stewarts wilt, beetle feeding causes little economic injury," Whalen says. "However, if you're growing a susceptible variety and didn't use a soil insecticide, be sure to scout fields beginning at the spike stage and continue until corn is 8 inches tall. We recommend an insecticide treatment if you find five or more beetles per plant and 50 percent of the plants show feeding signs."

Delaware residents can get further information on in-season pest activity by calling the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service CROP PEST HOTLINE (1-800-345-7544). Out of state residents should call 1-302-451-8851.

Enroll now for Cambria's Five-Acre Corn Club

EBENSBURG – Pennsylvania's Five Acre Corn Club provides farmers an opportunity to compete for corn growing awards, but more importantly club members can compare the results of their corn production efforts.

Summaries of Corn Club yields provide information on the yield effects of numerous cultural inputs such as: soil types, soil fertility levels, pH levels, plant populations, row spacings, fertilizer practices, weed control, tillage practices, crop rotations, etc.

Farmers may enroll in the Five Acre Corn Club by completing an official entry form at the Cambria County Agricultural Extension Office, Ebensburg, PA 15931 by July 1. The enrollee must be 18 or more years old and only one entry is allowed per farm and/or farm operator. The production field must be five acres or more.

A Pennsylvania State University soil test within the past two years is required If the field area is contoured, two or more strips on the same slope may be included in order to obtain the minimum five acre area. At harvest, all strips must be sampled in the yield determinations.

The acreage must be planted to a single variety of corn, says Ronald Hostetler. A new irrigated class was added in 1984.

Participants can enroll in only one of the five class categories, which are: Shelled Corn Harvest, Ear Corn Harvest, Three-Acre Harvest Sample (Shelled Grain), Three-Acre Harvest Sample (Ear Corn) and Irrigated Field (Ear or Shelled). Three Year Averages will also be considered for Shelled Grain Harvest, Ear Corn Harvest and Three-Acre Harvest Sample.

Eligibility in the three-year average classes requires three consecutive years' participation in one of the harvest classes.

The yield check for the large sample must be at least three acres and must include round trips through the field.

Current year champions in any of the class categories may not succeed themselves, and they are not eligible for the current Three-Year Average Award. However, they may enroll in the succeeding year in order to maintain continuity for the 3 year average class. A three-year average champion is not eligible to compete in the Corn Club for one growing season.

Club members may obtain individual production costs, by completing the budget portion of the report forms.

Official rules and enrollment forms are available at the Agriculture Extension Office, Ebensburg.

Fish-for-free today!

HARRISBURG — Rep. John Barley said today that the second Pennsylvania Fish-For-Free Day will be held on Saturday, June 1, in conjunction with National Fishing Week.

On Fish-For-Free day all public waters in the commonwealth will be open to nonlicensed anglers.

Last year's Fish-For-Free Day was the first of its kind in the nation. As a result, the Fish Commission received numerous requests from other states wanting to organize similar days.

Barley said that in addition to being a day when no license is required to fish, the commission, in association with local sportsmen's groups, will conduct hands-on fishing instruction at 41 sites throughout the state.

Sites include Muddy Run Park in Lancaster County and Lakes Marburg and Pinchot in York County.

At the sites, panfish packets will be distributed, containing a bobber and a panfish jig, along with publications from the commission on how to catch, clean and cook that prized catch.

The commission will also have loaner and refurbished equipment available for first-time anglers at the seminar sites.

Creativity, organization are the foundation for Edie Nolt's bridal consulting business

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

EPHRATA — According to tradition, spring is the time when thoughts turn to love. But for Edie Nolt, love, and the weddings it produces, are important throughout the year.

This enterprising farm wife, whose husband Melvin operates a beef and crop farm in Ephrata, manages Stonehaus Bridal Service, a consulting firm, out of her lovely farm home.

Having had three of her four daughters marry within a six month period, each with a large wedding, Edie has had lots of experience. When others turned to her for advice, her professional consulting began, and has continued, to grow.

Edie says simply, "I started to help in all kinds of ways." She said that young girls simply don't know what to do next when planning their weddings, and she has gained lots of valuable information to help.

Today her service, which is in its fourth year, includes information on the traditional items like cakes, invitations and flowers, but also such elusive things as gardens which might be perfect for a ceremony, dress shops to find "the" dress, and appropriate eating places.

Now, she also makes flower arrangements for weddings, and adds with a slight smile, "It became quite interesting." She now can call her business a "one-stop place."

Although her consulting business is relatively new, Edie has been involved in weddings for a long time, having made her first wedding cake in 1974. Over the years the wedding cake business grew, and when her daughters were teenagers they sometimes would produce 18-25 cakes in one week. She said the girls could make "pin money" that way, and they could all work together.

Her interest in cake decorating began when her five children, two of whom were twins, were babies. She said, "I'd practice and practice." Although she never took a course in it, she eventually became a 4-H leader and taught cake decorating. She said the ability to decorate cakes "is something I always had in me." Her five children are all married, and Edie is a grandmother. She says, "The youngsters and I are very close."

Edie's creativity is certainly a gift, and one which she keeps expanding. This creativity, coupled with a good sense of organization, is the foundation of her successful business.

Brides have a big job preparing for their wedding, and Edie advises that the time to start is as soon as the engagement is made. The very first thing to do is set the date, engage the church and see the minister. Receptions also must be booked early, because as she points out, "Many times suitable places are engaged a year in advance." A further consideration is that some fire halls will not serve receptions in July and August.

A very important question to ask before plans progress too far, Edie says, is "How much money do you have to work with?"

Edie recommends that gowns be ordered far in advance, and that florists also be given several months' notice. As for the men's clothing, she said all tuxedos should be tried on the day before the wedding to save last minute problems with poor fit and wrong sizes.

She suggests that the bride and her mother shop for suggestions for bridal party before going with the bridesmaids and other attendants. This saves some confusion, and allows the bride to make a choice that she is comfortable with, both in styles and colors.

There is no substitute for planning ahead, and Edie sums up her feelings by saying, "A well-planned wedding is a joy." She says you can tell instantly if it is well planned; otherwise things just don't fall into place.

Of course, a sense of humor helps get everyone through the inevitable crises which occur.

The most popular months for weddings, and therefore the busiest for Edie, are April, May, June, September and October. In the last few years, lavender, burgundy and dusty rose have been big favorites in colors, but Edie says that blues and pinks are now coming into popularity again.

And, though the trend has generally turned toward Saturday weddings, Edie says Sundays are again coming into favor. She adds, "Years ago weddings were bigger and then they started getting smaller. Now they are bigger again." Edie says it is rare to have a wedding with just 75-100 guests; many have 200 or more.

Edie works with one of her dried flower arrangements in the dining room of her home. She will make arrangments in someone else's container and in colors to match the decor of a customer's home.

The upstairs bedroom at the Nolt home has been turned into a showroom and holds samples of almost anything the well-thought-out wedding might need. Here, Edie puts candles in one of the candelabras she has available.

Edie looks over just one of the many books of wedding invitations she has available. Her wedding business, known as Stonehaus Bridal Service, operates out of her farm home near Ephrata.

There are frequently from three to seven bridesmaids, She suggests that one way of handling extra friends whom brides want to honor at the wedding is to have them help at the guest register or be a gift receiver.

Further advice she offers to help a wedding move smoothly is that it is very important to keep the receiving line moving. "Don't carry on long conversations. Talk and fellowship can come afterwards. It can get very boring for bridesmaids, and I think only the maid of honor and the best man need to stand in the receiving line. The rest can move around and talk with friends and make sure things are running smoothly."

Edie makes more and more floral arrangments on her own, though she also works closely with a florist in providing flowers for weddings. Many brides choose silk flowers, but fresh are also popular. Edie cautions that there can be hitches with flowers no matter how carefully planned. For instance, the flowers may come in a color which is not quite what was expected, or, as in the case of one of her daughters, "The flowers we ordered were still in South America in the fields on her wedding day." Add flexibility as another trait which is important in planning weddings.

Edie usually arrives at the church two hours prior to the wedding to work on decorations, although she seldom gets to see the wedding itself, because more likely than not, she is on her way to the next wedding. But she says, "I enjoy being at the church. I get to meet all the jittery grooms." She also helps solve crises like not having the proper number of boutonniers or corsages.

She always takes pins, extra flowers, extra ribbon, tape or other emergency aides.

Although her services reach much wider than just the wedding cakes, she still makes them for weddings, although she now holds the number to three on any given day. She assembles them at the reception, having learned the dangers of taking a completely decorated, tiered cake over icy roads in winter. She now takes the cakes, extra icing, extra flowers and all the materials and constructs it in place. She has a book of pictures of cakes she has done, plus many books with ideas, and often combines one or more, according to the wishes of the bride and groom.

The favorite flavor for cakes vary, although white remains the all-time most popular. That is followed closely by marble and red velvet. All Edie's cakes are made from scratch, and she prides herself on their moistness, which often brings compliments from people who don't expect it in a wedding cake. Other flavors which are sometimes requested include chocolate, yellow, spice and coconut. Her own daughters selected black walnut for their walnut cakes, a flavor which is more expensive. But Edie notes, "They cracked the walnuts themselves."

Edie says with a laugh, "I can't handle a 16-inch cake and open the door." To solve this problem, her husband travels with her to weddings, helping to carry the decorations, open the doors and generally assist. Edie says, "It helps tremendously. If he can't go along, I ask one of my daughters or a friend."

Organization is the key to making her work successful. She said she gets up very early on Saturdays, and has materials for different weddings in different areas of the house. She tries to think through all her needs before leaving home.

Bridal consultant

While Melvin helps her on weekends, Edie enjoys helping him when she can. She describes herself as an outdoor person, and says, "I work the land when he needs it, and I help with the baling. I love it–at the beginning of the week."

With their son involved in the farm, her help is not needed as much as it once was. Edie says, "We were always 'farm people,'" and she is obviously proud of her work at home.

In addition to consulting, which she does by appointment, Edie would like to expand her business of making floral arrangements for the home. She uses dried and silk flowers and will arrange them in a specific container and in specific colors. She has some arrangements on display in area businesses, and would like to do more.

"I have flower beds everywhere," she says, adding, "I am more and more into arranging flowers." She also enjoys her vegetable garden, but adds, "I got smaller." While she once had strawberries to sell to neighbors, she says, "I cut back on that."

Although she says it is hard to find time to sew now, Edie taught herself to sew when she was first married and "we didn't have the money to go out and buy things. I made everthing--hats, coats, dresses."

Because of her skill and enjoyment of sewing she became a sewing leader in 4-H. She adds, "All my children were in 4-H at one time. I was so pleased."

It is no surprise to hear Edie say she loves entertaining. She likes to have all her children home at least once a month, and often invites a group of others once a month. She notes, "My weakness is cookbooks. I have to collect recipes, and I like to try a new dish each time I have company."

Edie says her love of entertaining stems from her days at home where there were eight children. "My brothers were guinea pigs, and then my kids. They still laugh about it."

Hard work is a part of Edie's life, and she gets much pleasure from helping others plan what is the most important day in their lives. She enjoys having visits from brides she has worked with, and getting reports on the occasion. "When a bride can look back and see her wedding, it's something to remember. It's a joyous occasion." Edie's pleasure comes from making the wedding memorable.

"I'm an outdoor person," Edie says to describe herself. She has many flower beds throughout the lawn of their farm home and enjoys arranging fresh flowers in the home.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This morning I accidentally came across a quotation from one of our Extension agents that was made several years ago. You see, I was bemoaning the fact that now all of my six children had outgrown 4-H club work and were in college. They had all won many honors in 4-H and their bedroom walls are still decorated with strings of red, blue and big purple ribbons. Some are for geology, dairy, swine, flowers and vegetables.

The quote was "The glory has to stop sometime." At the time is was said, I felt very strongly that he was wrong. And, I have not changed my mind. Like any mother, I'm proud of my children and their accomplishments and I think they can go through life winning many more "glories." Our daughter was president of Collegiate 4-H Club at Penn State University. They have won honor, praise and distinction for their many achievements.

One has been asked to contribute a chapter in a medical book while another was asked to write a test for post graduate students to be classified as a professional in their field. One of our daughters has just been named manager of product development in the company where she works. Another daughter is an industrial engineer for a large company in northern Pennsylvania.

Our youngest son is traveling in several states at this time to test a piece of farm machinery that he helped to design. While still another is a general manager of five counties in southeastern Pa. for a farm organization.

But most important is the fact that they still remember their parents on birthdays and anniversaries. They phone, send cards, flowers and come to visit us with their children. It isn't so bad to grow old if you're loved.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Ground beef sizzled in a skillet and the macaroni I had just dumped into boiling water was starting to bubble. Shortly the troops would file in for lunch on this busy spring Saturday.

Then the stove light died and the kitchen turned shadowy in the cover of the maples around the house. A quick check of other electrical appliances and circuits confirmed my dread: the electricity had gone off.

This was the second time in a week, a really unusual happening for our cooperative's electrical service. After waiting a few minutes, hoping the lights would magically brighten, I called the cooperative's number, got a promise they'd be on the problem at once, and settled on sandwiches for lunch.

Surely this wasn't planned, but it all seemed fitting. For May has marked the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Rural Electrification, truly a turning point in the revolution of modern agriculture.

Two hours into the post-darkness hours of the thunderstorm-wrought first outtage, we were thirsty for drinks, wanted to wash up before going to bed, and were hankering to fill-up our hunger for the late night television news and weather reports. Reading by candlelight was tolerable, but not something my eyes felt they wanted to do for any extended period of time. A collective sigh of relief went up when the house lit up and the refrigerator started to hum again.

By mid-afternoon of the second outtage, I worried with a faint uneasiness because of the string of cows lounging in the pasture, but expecting to be milked in a just a few hours. But, a glance from the garden to the porch–where I'd turned on the light to see when the current was activated–showed that we were once again electrified.

Fifty years after the fact of rural electrification we have grown utterly dependent on the luxury–or necessity–of watts and volts.

What a day of rejoicing it must have been the first time our grandparents hung an electric milker–primitive no doubt by today's standards–on the family cow. And what a boon for consumers as refrigerated tanks bacame the standard on dairy farms.

Think of the release from housewife slavery to not have to polish soot-blackened lamps, or trim oily, greasy wicks, feed a smoking woodstove, or pound work-soiled heavy pants on a washboard.

How marvelous it must have seemed to have water gush from a faucet in the house at the turn of a spigot, rather than pump it with a crank mechanism outside on the back porch. Or to flush, in warmth, rather than shiver on a trip out to the little house at the end of the yard–especially before milking ona frozen January morning.

Softies–that's what we are, some might say. Suckled on the life-giving milk of electricity, courtesy of far-sighted farmers who then saw the potential of an electrified agriculture. Pioneers they were, cajoling their occasionally reluctant neighbors to share equally in the cost of stringing lines to distant, lonely, outlying farmsteads which private firms refused to serve.

Our progress today surely has its roots in the thin lines first strung by teams of horses and crews of sweaty, determined, rural men.

True, I'll admit to a tinge of guilt when I complain about a brief interruption that means I can't finish cooking lunch or watch the evening news.

But not guilty enough to even seriously consider ever giving up that blessed thin, elecrifying lifeline.

Celebrate Memorial Day with a picnic

Do you remember gazing out on a drifted driveway not too long ago, dreaming of summer and family picnics? Well the first three-day weekend of the summer season is upon us and it's time for steak on the grill, potato salad, chips, red beet eggs and other picnic goodies.

It doesn't matter if your holiday celebrations take you across the state to visit friends, next door to chat with the neighbors or right in your own backyard; you can make the most of Memorial Day with a cookout.

And the warm, sunny days of late May should remind you that June Dairy Month will soon be here. Next week Lancaster Farming begins a month-long tribute to the dairy industry. You can be part of our tribute if you share a favorite dairy recipe with us. We'll welcome your input and say thanks with a small gift of appreciation.

SPICY SKEWERED BEEF

1 cup grapefruit juice
2 tablespoons chopped scallions
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced

1 green pepper, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 tomato, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 large onion, cut in 1-inch pieces

Combine first 8 ingredients in medium bowl; mix well. Add beef cubes; refrigerate overnight, turning beef once. Remove beef from marinade; string on skewers, alternating with green pepper, tomato, and onion pieces. Brush beef and vegetables with marinade. Broil 10 to 15 minutes, turning to brown all sides. Baste with remaining marinade during broiling. Serve with hot cooked rice if desired. Makes 2 servings.

GRILLED PICNIC PITAS

Steak Marinade:

1 to 1½ pound top round steak, ¾ inch thick
1 envelope (4 serving size) onion soup mix
½ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Vegetable Pita Filling:

2 medium yellow squash, thinly sliced
1 small onion, thinly sliced
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
½ medium red or green pepper, cut in thin strips
2 tablespoons water
8 pita bread halves
1 medium tomato, chopped
Bottled herbal Italian salad dressing

Trim excess fat from meat. Slash remaining fat just to (not into) meat. Combine remaining marinade ingredients in glass dish. Place steak in marinade. Cover with plastic wrap. Marinate in refrigerator overnight, but no longer than 24 hours. Turn meat occasionally.

Combine vegetables and water on a square of heavy duty aluminum foil large enough for adequate wrapping. Bring 4 corners of foil up together in a pyramid shape. Fold edges together loosely in locked folds allowing for heat circulation and expansion. Keep upright to avoid leakage. Cook vegetable packet on an open grill over medium direct heat 25 to 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp.

After vegetables have cooked 12 minutes, remove steak from marinade. Grill over medium direct heat 5 to 7 minutes. Turn and grill 6 minutes for rare, 8 minutes for medium and 10 to 12 minutes for well done, brushing occasionally with marinade. Remove steak from grill.

Wrap pita bread halves in heavy duty aluminum foil and place on grill 10 to 15 minutes or until heated through. Slice steak diagonally into thin strips; slice strips in half crosswise. Spoon meat and hot vegetables into warm pita bread halves. Top with chopped tomatoes. Serve with salad dressing.

PICNIC PACKIN' CORNED BEEF KAISERS

1 12-ounce can corned beef, crumbled
1 cup finely shredded cabbage
⅓ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1½ tablespoons prepared mustard
1 tablespoon horseradish
2 8-ounce packages refrigerated crescent rolls
1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon water
Poppy or sesame seeds

Preheat oven to 375°F. In medium bowl, thoroughly combine first six ingredients. Separate crescent dough into rectangles; pinch to seal perforations and pat into rectangular shape. For each Kaiser, shape about ¼ cup corned beef mixture along one long edge of dough. Roll up jelly-roll style, sealing long edge tightly. Arrange seamside down on ungreased cookie sheet and connect two open ends, forming donut shape, sealing ends tightly. Brush with egg-water mixture; sprinkle with poppy or sesame seeds. Bake 20 minutes or until golden brown. Cool completely on wire rack before packing. Yields 8 sandwiches.

PICNICKERS' PIZZA PIE

1 pound ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 8-ounce can refrigerated crescent rolls
1 8-ounce can pizza sauce
1 4-ounce can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
⅓ cup pitted ripe olives, sliced
10 canned mild cherry peppers, cut in wedges
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
1 teaspoon leaf oregano

Brown ground beef and onion in frying-pan on grill; remove to absorbent paper and season with salt. Pour off drippings, leaving pan "greased." Separate triangles of crescent roll dough, place in pan to form circle and press edges together to form crust with rim. Spread half of pizza sauce over dough. Place ground beef over dough. Top with mushrooms, olives, and cherry pepper wedges. Pour remaining sauce over meat and vegetables; sprinkle with shredded cheese and leaf oregano Cover pan securely with aluminum foil; cook on grill at moderate temperature 20 to 30 minutes or until dough is lightly browned. Makes 4 servings.

Featured Recipe

This week's featured recipe comes from Ellen Sue Spivack. Ellen Sue and her husband, Roger, produce and ship 1,000 pounds of sprouts a week in their home-based business.

Deep Roots sprouts are different from bean sprouts in that they are slender filaments with a zippy, crunchy taste. And, while they don't stand up to cooking temperatures like bean sprouts, they are a crisp replacement for lettuce, croutons and other munchible foods.

Ellen Sue has written a cookbook titled "Fresh Whole Foods from A to Z." The following recipes are taken from her book. To learn more about Deep Roots, and for more sprout recipes, turn to the story featuring the Spivacks in this section.

Spuds and Sprouts

3-4 baked potatoes cut in half crosswise
Safflower or sunflower oil
Alfalfa sprouts
Sesame or caraway seeds

Scoop out potato flesh and use for mashed potatoes.

Brush inside of potato skins with oil.

Stuff potato skins with sprouts, sprinkle with seeds, and serve. (The sprouts and seeds can also be used to top the mashed potatoes.)

Nile begins its journey in Burundi

WASHINGTON — The destination: the source of the Nile, deep in the heart of Africa, where the longest and most mysterious river on earth begins as a trickle.

The journey of more than 4,000 miles leads south from the Mediterranean through fertile valleys, fierce desert, seemingly endless swamp, and hostile lands to a small spring by a windswept hill in Burundi.

By steamer, tugboat, and cross-country vehicle, author-photographer Robert Caputo spent eight months rediscovering the river in all its incredible incarnations. "Three of the best things in life along the Nile," he writes, "are tea, conversation, and the water pipe."

Egypt is the gift of the ancient Nile. No other country is so dependent on a single lifeline, although four-fifths of the river lies south of its border.

Nile Nurtured Egypt

Today 96 percent of Egypt's 48 million people are crowded into the fertile Nile Delta and Valley, on only three percent of the country's land. Egypt's very soil was born in the Nile's annual flood, which used to deposit as much as 20 million tons of silt on the fields along the river.

Africa's largest city, Cairo, and it's 10 million people spill out across the Nile to Great Pyramids, which rise up between the river and the setting sun. Egypt is growing by 100,000 people a month. In Cairo, Caputo says, "Some are forced to live on rooftops; others find a wretched home in one of the city's cemeteries."

In the valley to the south, the thin blue ribbon of the Nile unwinds for 1,800 miles over brown soil and green fields, some a few yards wide, others as broad as an Iowa cornfield.

Nearly 600 miles upriver from Cairo stands the greatest public work undertaken in Egypt since the Pyramids–El Sadd el-Aali, the High Dam at Aswan.

The harnessing of the Nile in 1964 broke the devastating age-old cycle of flood and drought. It has saved Egypt from the terrible drought and famine that now grip Ethiopia and some of its neighbors.

The High Dam created one of the world's largest man-made lakes, Lake Nasser. It stretches some 300 miles and holds the equivalent of two years of Nile water. The dam's power and water have transformed agriculture.

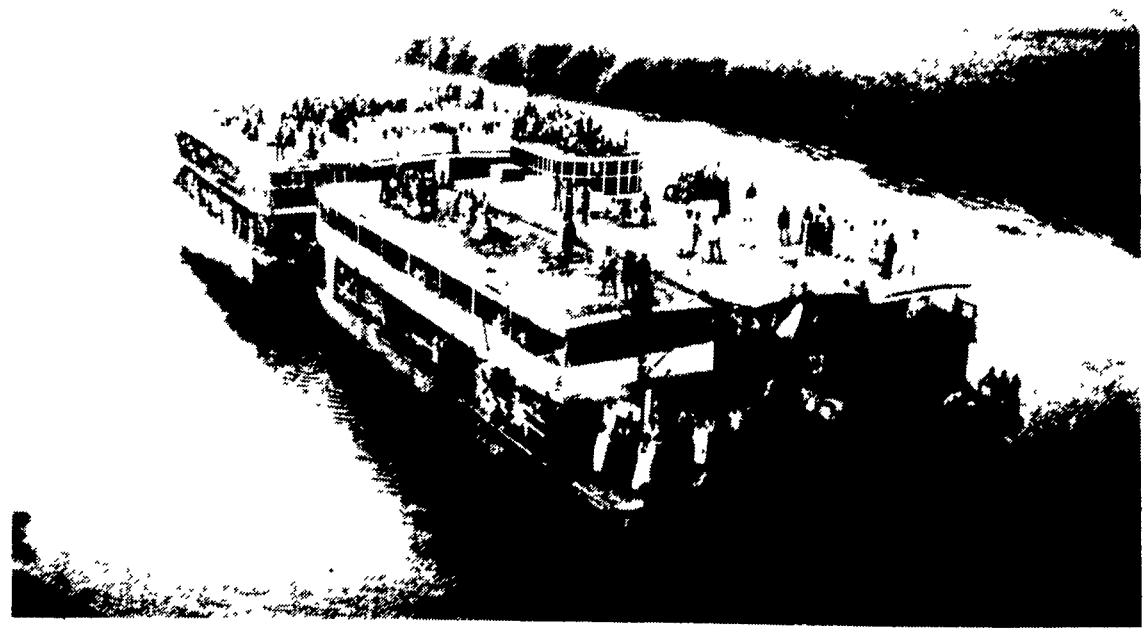
"Like all the generations of my family back to the pharaohs, I used to plant my crops and never know if I would harvest," a village elder told Caputo. "Now there is no fear; we know there will be water....And we can get three crops a year instead of one."

But the dam has been a curse, too. It traps the valuable silt, poisons soil with high salinity, and is blamed for erosion downstream and a coastal ghost town. The Egyptian Nile has become one long irrigation ditch.

Lake Drowns Homes

Lake Nasser drowned the villages of 60,000 Egyptian Nubians, who were moved to the desert to live in rows of cinder-block houses. "We left our fathers and grandfathers in the ground there, and they are lost," one Nubian lamented to Caputo.

Abroad a lake steamer, Caputo headed for the wide-rolling, unfettered Nile in troubled Sudan. He wound up sipping sweet tea in a circle of camel traders. "We drive camels...along the Trail of Forty Days to Egypt," one of them explained. "Camels are worth a lot in Egypt because the Egyptians like to eat them."



Five barges lashed to each other and a stern-wheeler became a Nile steamer in Sudan's vast swamp, the Sudd. The main means of travel during the rainy season, steamers may carry as many as 1,000 people on the 900-mile trip from Juba to Kosti. If all goes well, it takes six days, but breakdowns and running around can make it six weeks.

On Sudanese soil, Caputo steered his specially equipped vehicle into one of the world's fiercest deserts. There are no roads there; just tire tracks across the sand. A sandstorm can wipe them.

When he got stuck in the sand, Caputo dug trenches in front of the wheels and laid out aluminum sand ladders for traction. He slept in a cartop tent out of range of snakes and scorpions. He bathed with a jerrycan shower rigged to the roof.

As he passed through Sudanese Nubian villages, children shouted, "stop, stop," the only English words they knew. If he refused their welcoming offer to tea, they would scamper off and come back with a bag of dried dates. "Such generosity is moving in a land where people barely have enough for themselves," he writes.

At Khartoum, as oasis after more than 1,100 miles of sand, the Blue and White Niles merge, known in Arabic poetry as "the longest kiss in history." The White Nile is the mother river, flowing from the Victoria and Albert lakes and beyond.

King Must Be Perfect

Near the Sudd, the great swamp that blocked Nile traffic and exploration until the mid-1800s, Caputo visited with the Shilluk people, whose reth, or divine king, must be flawless. Even a missing tooth is reason enough to dethrone him.

At the Uganda border, Caputo writes, "My stomach feels queasy, my hands sweated as memories of Idi Amin's Uganda flooded into my mind." In 1979, Caputo had been arrested at the border by the dictator's guards.

This time, he was stopped at an army roadblock. Drunken soldiers with automatic rifles "swarmed over the car, spilling my baggage onto the ground. Anything they could easily slip into a pocket was fair game," Caputo writes. A half-mile down the road, it happened again. Conditions are worse now than under Amin, Caputo concluded. Then murder and torture were systematic; today the killing is random, he says.

In Uganda, the Nile is a network of streams, rivers, and lakes mingling together to create their mighty offspring. Its source is reckoned to be the river that feeds more water into Lake Victoria than any other–the Kagera.

Finally, on a windswept hill in southern Burundi, Caputo reached the end of his journey and the beginning of the Nile: "A tiny trickle of water issued from the earth."

Ladies Have You Heard?

Changing Times Call For New Wedding Gifts

Today most people have been working for awhile before they marry, and traditional wedding gifts may not be appropriate any more. For example, many people have the basics like toasters and bath towels.

Many people are giving gifts that are more luxury items than necessities.

Gifts that help the newlyweds plan for the future and manage their household are also appreciated.

One thing many people enjoy but don't buy for themselves is art work. Prints, paintings and sculpture in wood, glass or metal all make fine gifts, as long as they are bought with the newlyweds' taste in mind.

Lancaster County is a good place to shop for such gifts because of the many arts' fairs and craft shops.

If the couple enjoys cooking and entertaining, some specialty appliances make nice gifts. These include food processors and microwave ovens. Because space is often limited, appliances that do double-duty are usually appreciated.

Giving additional serving pieces to add to dinnerware the couple already has collected also makes sense.

For patio entertaining, quality plastic dinnerware or a picnic basket might come in handy.

Gifts that are an investment in the future are both practical and add a nice touch of symbolism at this time in the couple's life.

Savings bonds that increase in value as time goes on fit in with the emphasis on the future that a wedding brings.

Money and household management gifts are appropriate, especially for two career couples. These can include books about money management with a savings bond to go with it.

You also might buy a filing cabinet or other gift that encourages the couple to have a business center.

With dual-career couples, a gift of services might be appreciated. For example, you might pay to have their lawn taken care of for a year. Or you can volunteer to teach them a skill you have such as baking bread or wallpapering.

Gift certificates to a grocery store or your favorite recipes and the needed ingredients can also help a new couple start housekeeping.

Financial Records: Trouble Free And Retrieving

Was filling out your income tax forms this year especially frustrating? Did gathering information to compile your net worth statement seem an endless task? Better record keeping is one way to save time, energy and undue anxiety.

Good record keeping can be an asset, too, in improving your family finances. Accurate records are useful in making decisions on credit use, insurance, major purchases, and money designated for longer term goals.

Creating an efficient filing system is the first step to improving your record keeping. A filing system for your family's financial records doesn't have to be elaborate, costly, or time consuming. Setting up an accordian file, a series of folders, envelopes or even shoeboxes, properly labeled for current and annual records, is really three-fourths of the work.

Included in your current household files should be account books, bank statements, cancelled checks, receipts and receipted bills.

Permanent household filing systems should contain receipts and receipted bills for the past six years, your safe deposit box number, key and list of contents, warranties, letters of instruction and copies of your will, household inventory, health, education and employment records. All of these items may be needed in a hurry in the event of accident or financial crisis; be sure all your family members are acquainted with the files.

You might also note that certain financial records do not belong in your home. Your auto title and bill of sale, birth certificates and marriage and divorce records, government securities, corporate securities, insurance policies, mortgages, property and real estate papers, and the original copy of your will should all be secured in a safe deposit box.

In your filing system, include a separate envelope for anything concerned with taxes. As well as last year's return, file records of items that may be used as deductions that year. Include incidental expenses, such as miles traveled on a trip to the doctor or the cost of a lunch purchased for a business client.

Having a good record storage and retrieval system will prevent potential deductions from being lost in the shuffle and save you time, energy and frustration whenever financial records need to be located. Devise your own system now and follow through with it throughout the year; have your family's financial picture at your fingertips.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Follow these steps to success

Did you know that you can't cook in a microwave? Meat turns into shoe leather. Scrambled eggs turn green. Meats don't brown. Pork isn't safe. Rolls get rubbery. Cakes don't rise right. Pizza gets soggy. Chicken tastes raw. Biscuits become white rocks. Eggs and hot dogs explode...the list goes on. But wait, there are two exceptions. Baked potatoes and bacon are magic, they cook well!

It's true, all these things CAN happen to food in a microwave, if it's not defrosted, cooked, or reheated properly. To avoid these disasters you need to understand what your microwave can do, how it does it, and how it is different from your range. (By the way, all those disasters listed above are from overcooking, or cooking on too high a power level!)

If you are one of the many people who have recently added a microwave oven to your kitchen, welcome! Today's column is dedicated to you, a new microwave owner, to help you be a successful microwave user right from the start. If you've had a microwave for a while, read on, a review of the basics won't hurt you!

– The following foods don't cook well in a microwave (or need a special recipe or utensil to cook properly): Hard boiled eggs, fried foods like eggs and chops, individual cookies, two crust pies (either pot pies or fruit pies), large amounts (over 6 cups) of liquids like soup or big pots of spaghetti, large sheet cakes, angel food, sponge or chiffon cakes, pizza with an uncooked crust, and nut or yeast breads.

– Most foods will not get CRISPY in a microwave without special utensils like a browning grill. If the food, such as breaded fish sticks, has to be crispy to be good to you, use your range!

– When microwaves enter food, they cause the food molecules (tiny particles) to vibrate. As the molecules vibrate millions of times each second, friction causes heat to build up quickly inside the food, cooking it. In a greatly oversimplified sense, your food rubs itself cooked in a microwave oven!

– One of the most basic facts is that quantity is important. The more food you add to the oven, the longer it takes to cook or reheat. A cup of water will be hot for tea in about 2 minutes in a 700 watt oven. But three cups will take almost three times as long! If you change quantities of food in a recipe, you will need to lengthen or shorten the cooking time.

– Microwaves heat food from the outside in to the center. Since the edges of food are heated very quickly, the center may not be fully cooked (or warmed if you're reheating) when the edges are done (hot).

– Standing time is the biggest difference between range and microwave cooking. During standing time the food cooks more, as the heat from the edges is conducted to the middle. Most overcooked food becomes overcooked during the standing time. Look for The Micro Way next week for a more thorough discussion of standing time and how to use it to your advantage!

– Stir foods once or twice during the cooking (reheating) time to distribute heat from the edges in to the center. If you can't stir, turn the power down to medium (50,5), but the food will take longer to cook (warm up).

– Arrange larger pieces of food near the corners or edges of a container. If the food is evenly sized, check halfway through to see if the pieces in the middle are less done (warm) than the edge or corner pieces. If so, rearrange them.

– Thick foods like roasts or whole chickens should be turned over in most ovens, so the top and bottom are evenly cooked. Start these upside down, turn right side up halfway through the cooking time.

– Food in a ring or donut shape will cook (reheat) more evenly than a solid mass. Push foods to be reheated to the edges of a container instead of leaving them in a lump in the middle.

– When you use high power for cooking or reheating, stay by the oven and stir sh[illegible], turn, etc. your food. Just like on your range, foods burn easily on high. If you're not in a hurry, turn the power down to medium (50 % power). The food will cook more evenly without stirring–but it will take longer to cook.

– Dry, rubbery, or hard foods are overcooked. Microwave cooked and reheated foods should be soft, moist and tender.

– Last but not least, read your microwave manual! It may not be fun, but it sure helps you use your microwave successfully!

Sauces are easy to cook in a microwave. Try this easy cheese sauce for vegetables, eggs, pasta, or anything! Cook your vegetables first in a covered container. Let them stand, covered, on your counter while you make the sauce. When the sauce is done, your vegetables will have had 5 minutes standing time, and both will be ready to serve at the same time.

Cheese Sauce

2 tablespoons margarine or butter
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
½ to 1 cup shredded cheddar cheese (2-4 ounces)

1. Put margarine in a 2-cup glass measure and melt on high for 30-45 seconds.

2. Stir flour, mustard and salt into margarine, stirring until smooth. When mixture is smooth with no lumps, stir in the rest of the milk.

3. Cook on high for 3 minutes, stirring well each minute. (Cook 1 minute, stir; cook 1 minute, stir; cook 1 minute, stir.) Make sure you stir up the flour that settles to the bottom of the container.

4. When the sauce boils and thickens, immediately add the cheese, stirring until it melts. If the cheese is in large shreds, you may have to heat the sauce for 30-60 seconds longer (on high) to melt the cheese lumps. Makes about 1½ cups.

Hints: The white sauce (without cheese) can be used for creamed vegetables, meats, etc. The cheese sauce can be added to cooked macaroni and heated in the microwave for a quick macaroni and cheese casserole.

Indiana Co. honors 4-H leader Mary States

BY BETH NESBIT
Staff Correspondent

INDIANA — 4-H leader Mary States was recognized for 24 years of service at the annual Indiana County 4-H leader's appreciation dinner, held recently at the Holiday Inn in Indiana.

"I can't imagine rural society without 4-H," Mary says. Mary was a 4-H'er as a youth and became a junior leader of the community club in Armaugh in 1955. For the past 21 years, she has served as leader for the South Indiana Livestock Club. Her husband, Don, is a co-leader.

Mary is now on her second-generation of 4-H'ers, leading the kids of some of her first club members. She says she has especially enjoyed watching the Indiana County Fair, the highlight of the 4-H year, grow during her years of 4-H involvement.

Misse Mallino, a 4-H member, and Carol Schurman, an Indiana County youth extension agent, spoke to the leaders about the National 4-H Conference they attended. Both stressed that the conference is not just a tour of Washington and the National 4-H Center, but a learning experience for all participants as well. The knowledge gained at National 4-H Conference enables those who attend to bring new ideas home to their counties.

Schurman also presented "Statue of Liberty — What it Means to 4-H." She told the leaders what the statue means to them as U.S. citizens as well as its representation to the 4-H organization. The Statue of Liberty has several publications in circulation and leaders can get a copy for use during 4-H meetings.

Indiana County Extension Home Economist Pat Leach talked to the leaders about storytelling, which she researched during a leave of absence from work. She worked with young children in an adopt-a-grandparent program at a neighboring rest home. The program helped both young and old establish better lines of communication.

Jim Scott and Kris Ferraro, Indiana County's 4-H king and queen, talked about the value of volunteer 4-H leaders to the organization and its members.

Anna Mae Bell, Buttons and Bows 4-H Club, and Linda Lippert, Northern Livestock 4-H Club, reported on the State Leaders Forum at Penn State University. Anna Mae told the leaders of a computer seminar she had attended. She also spoke of a former 4-H'er who is now a Penn State student. The student told her that 4-H has helped him throughout college and he expects it will continue to enrich his life.

Linda attended the meat judging seminar where she learned about different cuts of meat.

Albertson wins Vanguard Award

DETROIT, Mich. — Lin M. Albertson, assistant public affairs manager for Ford Motor Company's Tractor Operations, is the winner of the 1985 Vanguard Award, presented by the Detroit Professional Chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., for positive portrayal of women in the media.

She was honored for developing, implementing and publicizing a full-scale Agricultural Women's Program directed at farm women for Ford Tractor Operations. The program increased Ford Tractor's visibility among farm women; helped them gain recognition as viable partners in the farming operation, and delivered the message to farm women that Ford Tractor cares about what they think and what their needs are, and recognizes their key roles as decision-makers and prime tractor customers.

The program included an Agricultural Women's Council with 13 women representing leading North American farm organizations, a finance seminar presented to major farm women's groups across the country, and an extensive survey — sent to more than 9,000 women — to find out their "actual" role in the farming operation.

The Vanguard Award seeks to reward an individual or firm for positive, non-stereotyped portrayals of women and to heighten general awareness of factors that enhance women's images and status. The award is an all-media competition of communications efforts among professionals in advertising, public relations, newspapers, magazines, television and radio. The 1985 Award was presented recently during the annual Matrix Dinner of Women in Communications at Lovett Hall in Dearborn.

Albertson is a native of Detroit and obtained bachelor's and master's degrees from Wayne State University. She joined Ford Motor Company in 1977 as a communications specialist in the photomedia department. In 1982, she was appointed to the public affairs staff as features editor for the Ford Times magazine. After a brief assignment as Ford Times' assistant advertising manager, she joined Ford Tractor Operations in 1983.

Kids need time alone too

"Please do not disturb!"

The big sign on the bedroom door may make parents wonder if this is a new form of rebellion — a barricade to keep them out.

It is not unusual for grade school children to seek some time to be alone,. according to Growing Up, the child development newsletter for school age children. In fact, it is a healthy sign. This time of solitude serves many purposes.

Information overload

There is such a wealth of new information being passed on to a child in school that some time is needed to integrate all of it.

A child whose mind has been bombarded with new information needs periods of quiet to make those things her own. Otherwise, new knowledge remains superficial and may soon be forgotten.

Emotional stability

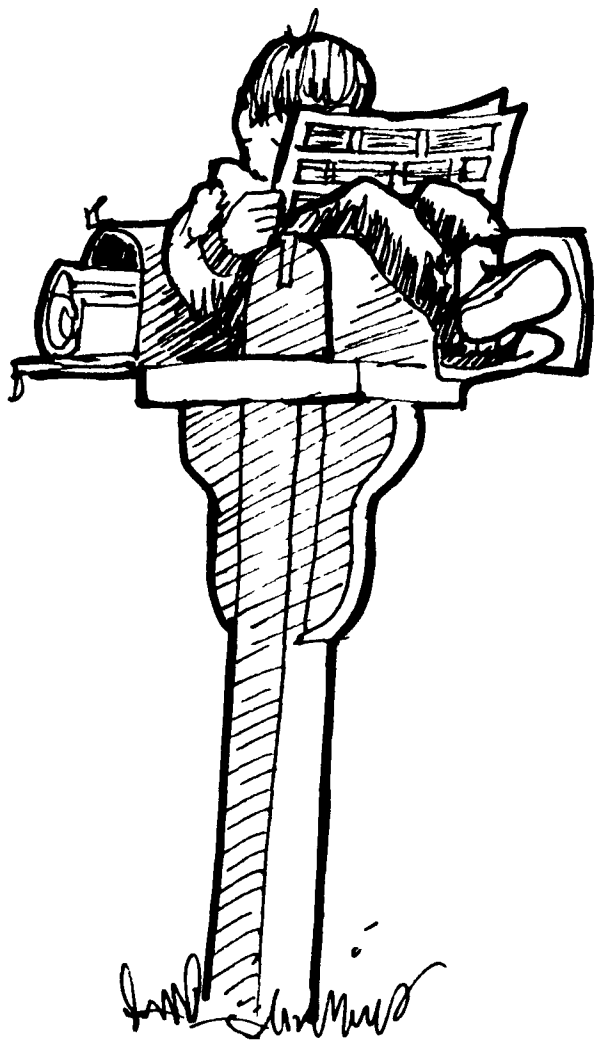
Preteens and teenagers, especially, are pulled in many different directions by their emotions. At one moment they think they can handle the responsibilities of adulthood. The next moment they do something that reminds them they are still children. They need time to fit both parts of their personalities together.

Self-identity

"Who am I?" "Who do I want to be?" A young person needs solitude to ponder her own individual strengths and weaknesses. She also needs time to dream new dreams about who she might become.

Personal pride

Every young person needs time alone to do whatever she enjoys doing. It may be practicing a particular athletic skill or playing the piano. Too often parents rush in to give their applause or "show off" their child to friends. The child, however, may prefer to be alone to enjoy the self-satisfaction she gains from her own efforts.



The lonely child

There is, of course, the extreme of always wanting to be alone that may be a sign of loneliness. Frequently this problem of withdrawn behavior may not be detected in school, since the quiet child rarely gets the teacher's attention. If the child chooses to sit alone in the school cafeteria every day, no one may notice.

Parents are usually the first to detect the problem and should discuss it with their child. If the problem persists, parents may want to seek professional help to fiend out why the child is lonely and withdrawn.

Tips for parents with emerging preschoolers

MEDIA — Two- and three-year-old children are sometimes described as 3-T, terrible, troublesome and talkative. Living with an emerging preschooler is a challenge, says Extension Home Economist Greta C. Vairo. She offers several suggestions for parents to keep in mind during this stage of development.

A two or three year old can do more than just walk. The child can now climb, open, close, drop, push, pull, hold and let go. The child's growing muscle and motor abilities, along with developing mental capabilities, enable him or her to explore the environment more fully.

The child is very eager to use these new skills and may use them over and over again, sometimes to the dismay of the parent who has not yet adjusted to the child's mobility and sense of adventure. At this time the parent must become more aware of safety hazards in the home, because the child has no sense of anticipating danger or recognizing the consequences of his actions.

Parents must also recognize that the young child needs to use these new skills at his own pace and in his own time. If the child is allowed and encouraged to do things, he develops the feeling that he is able to control his body, his muscles, his whole self and his environment. Some experts maintain that if the child does not develop this sense of control, he will develop a sense of shame and doubt. This feeling may occur when parents become impatient and do for the child what she can do for herself. This situation is permissible once in a while, but problems may arise when parents rush in too often. An overprotective and constantly critical parent may cause the child to feel shame and doubt about his own abilities.

Parents must also make adjustments during this time. The docile, smiling, consistently eager-to-cuddle child is gone, replaced by a much more active one. This change puts a great deal of stress on some parents as demonstrated by the high rate of child abuse during this stage of development.

Parents will be better able to cope if they recognize that the child is a normal person. One thing parents can do is to encourage the child to do dozens of little jobs around the home. In this way, the child and the parent will not be meeting head on. The child will develop a sense of control, a sense of being able to do things, and an assurance that the parents acknowledge his abilities.

While encouragement is important, the parents will still need to allot time for the child and to exercise the necessary patience with him or her. Parents may need to consider their own lives, too. Because time is given so liberally to the young son or daughter, parents may have to make an effort to reserve a certain amount of time for themselves.

TAKING THE FEAR OUT OF FIRE

Chills went up and down my spine the other night s the screaming sounds of the fire sirens were heard racing down the street. "Would they get there in time?" and "Was everyone out of the house?" were questions running through my mind. Thanks to our volunteer fire company the family was OK and the fire damage was minimized.

Home fires always remind me of an experience when I was younger and "back home." I remember waking up one night to hear my dad yelling, "Great scott, Bill's house is on fire!" Bill lived in a little shack on the property at the end of our long farm lane. I remember Dad racing out in the truck and the flames engulfing the house. Bill had been rescued but the house was gone. I remember this prompted discussion in our family of how we would get out of our bedrooms if there ever was a fire.

Fire is a big hazard for preschoolers. Children under age five comprise seven percent of the American population but account for 17 percent of all fire deaths. Case studies indicate that thousands of these injuries and deaths could have been prevented if the children had been taught a few basic concepts about fire and burn safety.

Taking the fear out of fire may be an important step in preparing your children for a fire in your home. A first step is to discuss with the child what to do and where to go in case there is a fire in the home.

Fire drills will reinforce this knowledge any may help prevent panic. Some professionals encourage their preschoolers to keep shouting "fire" until they have made their way out of the smoke filled room. This makes it easier for the parent or firefighter to find the child if he or she cannot get out.

Another concept that can easily be taught is to "keep low" in case of fire. Smoke and toxic gases are more often the cause of death in a fire than burns from flames. Because of this, it is important to move out of the burning building with your head under the smoke. Smoke tends to rise, making it easier to breathe closer to the floor.

Older children and adults should crawl close to the floor to avoid smoke inhalation. Since preschoolers are small in size, bending low under the smoke is recommended as a safe, fast way for this age group to exit a burning building.

Another important lesson that can be taught to preschoolers is what to do if their clothes catch on fire. Parents can teach that there are three things to do right away if their clothes catch on fire. The child should stop where he is and drop to the ground with his hands over his face, and roll over and over until the fire is out. Have a mini-drill where you demonstrate Stop, Drop and Roll and practice it together.

Probably the simplest fire prevention measures include a smoke detector (with an active battery) and "Tot Finder" decals for windows in your child's bedroom.

By explaining fire safety to your children, you are taking the panic out of fire. The creators of Sesame Street have prepared an excellent resource for parents and preschool teachers to make this important subject less threatening to young children. The booklet includes poems, songs, skits, activities and even a record. The "Fire Safety Resource Book" may be obtained by writing: Children's Television Workshop, Community Education Service Division, Department FS, One Lincoln Plaza, New York, New York 10023. The cost is $1 plus postage.

Remember, the child's life you save may be your own!

Sports outting to benefit Md. youth program

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – One of the state's all-time professional baseball greats will be guest of honor at the Maryland 4-H Club Foundation's fourth annual benefit golf and tennis tournament next month.

This year's event is scheduled June 3 at the Holy Hills Country Club west of New Market, just off U.S. highway I-70.

The honoree will be Charles E. "Charlie" Keller of Yellow Springs, former Frederick County 4-H boy, who now operates Yankeeland Farm, a Standardbred horse-breeding operation north of Frederick.

Keller's farm name is a reminder of the sports fame which he achieved during a professional baseball career with the New York Yankees organization more than a generation ago. Before signing with the Yankees in 1937, Charlie had been a powerful home-run slugger at the University of Maryland.

The June 3 golf tournament will get under way with a shotgun start at noon. The tennis tournament is set for 1 to 4 p.m. Prizes for both golf and tennis will be awarded during a buffet dinner which begins at 7 p.m.

There will be a fun auction of donated items following the dinner. All money raised above actual expenses will be used to support 4-H youth programs throughout the state.

Scoring for the golf tournament will be based on the Calloway handicap system. No previously established handicap is necessary to enter the competition.

Registration forms are available at golf and tennis clubs throughout central Maryland. Or, you may call Amy F. Leber at the Maryland 4-H Club Foundation office on the University of Maryland campus in College Park. Mrs. Leber's telephone number is (301) 454-3736. Registration deadline is May 30. Persons wishing to donate items for the fun auction should also call Mrs. Leber by May 30.

Elizabeth Heald crowned Centre Co. dairy princess

PLEASANT GAP — Elizabeth Amy Heald of Spring Mills was crowned 1985 Centre County dairy princess May 19 at the Logan Grange Hall, Pleasant Gap. She succeeds Judy Vonada, the 1984 dairy princess.

Beth, the daughter of Judith and William Heald, was also the presentation winner of the evening. Her presentation centered around the differences between milk and other beverages.

Beth has had much experience with the dairy promotion program. She was the alternate dairy princess in 1983 and is currently attending Penn State, majoring in dairy production and extension.

A graduate of Penns Valley Area High School, Beth owns three Holstein heifers. She has shown dairy cattle for several years and has been active in the Centre County 4-H Dairy Club, the Penn State Dairy Science Club, and the Penn State Block and Bridle Club.

Dora Kay Hettinger, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Hettinger, Rebersburg, is the first alternate dairy princess for 1985. Her presentation included an original song and dance routine.

The second alternate is Amy Nyman, the daughter of Claude and Ruth Nyman of Howard. She and bossie the cow encouraged teen-agers to drink milk.

Annette Emel, the granddaughter of Mrs. Dorothy Neff of Howard, was selected Ms. Congeniality.

As the Centre County dairy princess, Beth will appear at many events, including a number of "June is Dairy Month" activities and a mall promotion June 20 to 22. She will also visit several local shopping centers and cheese shops.

In July Beth and her court will participate in the Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts. Also in July, which is National Ice Cream Month, she will promote ice cream at local ice cream stores.

Beth will attend the Summer Princess Seminar and is eligible to compete in the State Dairy Princess Pageant in Harrisburg on September 24.

Judges for the pageant were Linda Davis, Clarence Corman, and Jay Grove. Wendy Williams of State College served as master of ceremonies.

The new princess received many gifts including dinners at local restaurants, flowers, cosmetics and gift certificates from local merchants.

New ag business "takes root" in downtown Lewisburg

BY MARGIE FUSCO
Staff Correspondent

LEWISBURG — In less than 600 square feet, Roger and Ellen Sue Spivack are producing and shipping 1,000 lbs. of cash crops every week. The entire Deep Roots operation can be found in a demure late-Victorian house tucked in the business district of this Union County community.

"When we say we grow sprouts, most people think we mean brussel sprouts," Roger points out. They're wrong.

Sprouts are germinated seeds, grains, and beans. They're edible, nutritious, and outstanding as a cash crop.

Second, they need few frills. The water is better if it's hard. Sprouts like moderate (60 to 65 degree) temperatures but can withstand some fluctuation.

Third, they grow fast. Deep Roots crops are ready for harvest in four days. And perhaps best of all, they have an eager and growing market.

You may already be familiar with bean sprouts, a thick kind of sprout used in Chinese cooking. Deep Roots sprouts are different. They're slender filaments with a zippy, crunchy taste.

They don't stand up to cooking temperatures like bean sprouts, but Deep Roots sprouts (primarily alfalfa, but also lentil, radish, and Japanese adzuki bean) are a crisp replacement for lettuce, croutons, and other munchible foods.

The Spivacks and their work crews package and sell sprouts to both wholesale and retail markets in the grocery and food service industries.

Their products are found in three major East Coast supermarket chains as well as many smaller ones and in a string of "Mom and Pop" grocery and natural food stores from Maryland and Delaware/ New Jersey areas to Connecticut.

In addition to sprouts, Deep Roots produces herb blends that are freeze-dried, bottled and sold as seasonings in retail markets where they are sometimes offered as salt-free, low-sodium alternatives to conventional seasonings.

Ellen Sue and Roger call themselves "closet farmers" because of the size of the Deep Roots operating space. The entire business takes up the first floor of the Spivacks' home and the one-car garage behind the house.

The growing space is filled with racks of germinating seeds. As the seeds begin to sprout, they are placed under a mixture of incandescent and candescent light to "green up."

Alfalfa sprouts, for example, are harvested when they are crisp and emerald-tipped, at their peak in nutrients. While a work crew is rinsing and harvesting a new crop of sprouts, Roger explains that another crew will use his office to label the shipment that will be stored briefly in a cooler until refrigerated delivery trucks arrive.

The Spivacks are proud of their product, calling it the Mercedes-Benz of sprouts.

"We market early, sweet sprouts," Ellen Sue says. "Other growers are growing their crops in packaging — the selling box. Their product is never washed, and it never stops growing after it's harvested and shipped. The result is long, over-mature, grassy sprouts for the consumer. We're fussier than that."

Deep Roots crops are hand-tended in a process that includes washing, hulling, and removal from the growing medium before packaging.

"We've thrown out entire crops if we didn't like the way they looked," Roger says. "The first time we did it, it hurt. But I told everyone, 'This is where a quality reputation begins.'" He notes that Deep Roots sprouts kept in the home under proper refrigeration may last as long as four weeks.

If someone had told the Spivacks 20 years ago that they'd become sprout farmers, the couple would have laughed.

"We were living the suburban dream," Ellen Sue says. "We had two kids, a station wagon, and a house in Rockland County, New York." Roger commuted daily to Manhattan where he was a marketing executive for major firms such as General Foods.

"One day I looked out the window of my office," Roger recalls. "Down below I saw the ghetto. I said to myself, 'What am I doing up here that relates to what's going on down there?'"

He began to get involved in community projects. As that involvement began to deepen, both Roger and Ellen Sue confronted a sense of responsibility to society.

"We grew up in the 1940s and 50s," Roger says. "It was a different time. We were told: Your legacy is a world of peace and prosperity. Your responsibility is to improve on that. Some people our age are fulfilling that charge by joining civic and service clubs. We've found a slightly different way."

Leaving his job, Roger took the family to a kibbutz in Israel for a year. Ellen Sue recalls that the transition from suburban New York to the kibbutz life was a shock.

"We went from a liberal environment to a socialized, structured life, and we couldn't accept everything. We weren't used to placing our children in a state-run nursery while we went off to the fields, and we couldn't always agree with their disciplining. It really wasn't for us."

But the Spivacks came away from the kibbutz with some new views, including a respect and admiration for agriculture and commitment to vegetarianism.

"We learned to eat differently there," Ellen Sue says, "and we liked it."

Returning to the United States, Roger accepted a job with Walnut Acres, a natural food grower and distributor in Penn's Creek, Pa. Roger and Ellen Sue later opened their own storefront operation, retailing Walnut Acres and other natural food products in Lewisburg.

In 1978, they began a small sprouting operation in their kitchen, to provide their customers with a fresh, quality product. The market grew almost as rapidly as the sprouts. When two shopping malls opened in the area and foot traffic and sales volume began to decline in the Deep Roots store, the Spivacks made the leap and closed the storefront, converting the first floor into their sprouting business.

Today, Deep Roots sprouts are shipped weekly to the Philadelphia and Allentown areas and twice weekly to New York markets. The Spivacks' son Ira, 21, is kept busy in Philadelphia marketing their products. With business booming, Roger and Ellen Sue have found time to explore again their social responsibilities.

They've become active in the Hunger Project, a national movement dedicated to combating world hunger. Almost a year ago at a Hunger Project meeting, Ellen Sue had an idea.

Studies from Washington State University and other sources had indicated that sprouts could be a good crop for certain third world countries where there is seasonal famine, hunger problems between when stored food is depleted and when the next harvest is gathered. But no one had yet mounted a large-scale effort to introduce sprouting to these countries.

Ellen Sue recalled John Chapman, the pioneer who created a food source for the early settlers in Pennsylvania and Ohio by sowing apple seeds as he traveled. She began to think about a similar project on a world scale, and with friends began to develop Johnny Alfalfa Sprout.

Only a few months old, Johnny Alfalfa Sprout is already reaching across the ocean. Volunteers of the organization are training people in how to raise sprouts, and the nonprofit organization is providing free seeds.

Seeds have already been sent to Guyana, Guatemala, the Philippines, Zimbabwe, and Tanzania. The Organization is finalizing permits and plans to send shipments to Peru, Bolivia, Kenya, and the Marshall Islands. The U.S. Department of Agriculture is helping the group obtain shipping permits and work through the red top in other countries.

But Johnny Alfalfa Sprout is also a domestic project. Ellen Sue is involved in getting sprouting programs started at senior citizen centers and community soup kitchens, to provide a nutritious, year-round source of fresh produce for the needy. Johnny Alfalfa Sprout projects are staffed by volunteers and funded by the sale of publications, including two vegetarian cookbooks Ellen Sue authored.

People who would like to know more about Johnny Alfalfa Sprout can write the project at P.O. Box 294, Lewisburg, PA 17837.

Workers wash and hull sprouts. Many of the workers are college students from nearby Bucknell University.

Roger poses in the one-car garage he and son Ira converted into a growing room and cooler. Sprouts are germinating in tray beds at right.

Guy Phillips (left), chair of Delaware Poultry Improvement Association's 1985 Junior Broiler Contest, and DPIA president Dick Niblett congratulate winners Shawn Cook, Kenton (fourth); Stephen Carroll, Middletown (third) and Kim Dannenhauer, Felton (second). First prize winner Jason Breeding, Greenwood, was unable to attend because of illness.

Winners named in Del. Jr. Broiler program

NEWARK, Del. – Winners have been selected for the 1985 Delaware Junior Broiler Program. First prize went to Jason Breeding, a 4-H'er from Greenwood. The runner-up was Kimberly Dannenhauer, a 4-H'er from Felton.

This was the 36th year of the program which is sponsored by the Delaware Poultry Improvement Association and the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware. Last year's program was cancelled due to the threat of avian influenza.

At 37 pounds, Dannenhauer's seven-bird entry has the heaviest total live weight among the 86 finalists. Her chickens averaged 5 29 pounds each in only 43 days' growth. According to entension poultry specialist George Chaloupka, the grow-out time had to shortened this year to keep weights in line with a broiler-size chicken. Advancements in breeding, feeding and management continue to produce more weight in a shorter length of time with less feed.

Since the contest began in 1949, officials have reduced the grow-out period repeatedly. In 1955 competing broilers required 74 days to reach an average weight of 3.8 pounds. Ten years later, participants were raising chickens averaging 4.39 pounds in 57 days. In 1975 competing chickens reached an average live weight of 4.74 pounds in 53 days. This year's chickens took only 43 days to reach an overall average weight of 4.55 pounds.

In addition to the first two winners, cash prizes went to the following participants: Stephen Carroll, Middletown; Shawn Cook, Kenton; Stephen Cook, Middletown; Mark Carroll, Middletown, and Dale Cook, Kenton; Bobby Fifer, Wyoming; Fred Biggs, Felton; Debbie Warren, Kenton; Vivian Mills, Milton; Renee Thompson and Kristie Bullen, Middletown; Edward Moore, Wyoming, and Chris Kilby, Townsend; Pam Haman, Middletown; Bobby Willoughby, Odessa; James Skaggs, Clayton; Jamie Straughn, Townsend; Michelle Bass, Viola.

The purpose of the Delaware Junior Broiler Program is to teach boys and girls how to raise a good flock of chickens, keep records and develop responsibility. Industry representatives, feed dealers, vo-ag teachers, 4-H club agents and service clubs help support the event, giving contestants information and advice on growing the birds according to recommended practices. Each participant raised 50 chicks to 43 days of age, then selected the seven best for judging.

Wayne Co. 4-H'ers complete tractor safety program

HONESDALE — The 1985 Wayne County 4-H Tractor Safety Program has been completed with seven 4-H members participating in this year's activities.

The main purpose of the 4-H tractor safety program is to stress safe operation of farm tractors and equipment and to teach routine tractor maintenance and safety checks.

Some of the topics covered in this year's program included: instruments and controls on a tractor, maintenance and safety checks on farm tractors, farm tractor operation, tractor safety on the farm, tractor hitches, power-take-offs and hydraulics, tractor safety on public highways, farm machinery accident situations and safety standards for agricultural tractors and implements.

A total of five meetings were held, with one of these meetings being held at Marshall Machinery, Inc. This shop meeting allowed the 4-H members to look at different pieces of farm equipment and tractors and gave the members an opportunity to ask questions dealing with equipment use, safety features and required maintenance.

All of the 4-H members took a written examination on the safety and maintenance topics covered in the shop and classroom meetings.

The 4-H members also took part in a tractor driving contest. This contest was held at Marshall Machinery, Inc. on Saturday, May 4.

The 4-H tractor driving contest consisted of four parts: a pre-check of the tractor before starting it up, hooking the tractor to a 2-wheeled farm implement, taking the tractor-implement combination through an obstacle course and returning the tractor and implement to the starting point.

The 4-H tractor driving contest is a safety and skill contest. Each 4-H member had to show his skill in maneuvering the tractor and implement combination through the obstacle course and also in backing the implement into an enclosure. Penalty points are assessed to the 4-H driver if he commits safety infractions or fails to properly negotiate the driving course. The 4-H member with the least number of points is the winner in this contest.

The results of this 4-H tractor driving contest were: first, Mike Marks; second, Matt Marks; third, Branko Dickhut; fourth, Tim Rutledge; fifth, Marshall Marks; sixth, Kevin Hicks; seventh, Kurt Hicks.

Yogurt is option for those who can't take milk

NEWARK, Del. — Milk is the primary source of the important nutrient calcium. Unfortunately, not everyone can drink milk.

Some people suffer intestinal discomfort because their bodies can't digest lactose, the natural form of sugar present in milk, Dr. Sue Snider says. These people may be deficient in the enzyme, lactase.

Researchers at the University of Minnesota, however, have found that such individuals experience no discomfort eating yogurt. Tests were conducted with people known to be deficient in lactase. Similar amounts of lactose were added to yogurt, milk and water. Test participants give the yogurt had fewer cases of diarrhea or gas than those given the lactose dissolved in water or milk.

Researchers also found that those eating the yogurt absorbed more of the lactose than those drinking the milk or water solutions.

Yogurt is a cultured dairy product that can be made from whole, lowfat or skim milk with added nonfat dry milk, Snider says. Most plain lowfat yogurt has some dry milk solids added to give the product stability. One cup of plain lowfat yogurt can provide 50 percent of the adult daily requirement of calcium, 35 percent of riboflavin and 21 percent of protein.

It has about 145 calories and provides about 415 milligrams of calcium. That's twice as much calcium as in one ounce of cheddar cheese, with only about 30 more calories.

Maryland youth compete at Wills 4-H/FFA Fair

BY JOHN STOKES SCHMIDT
Staff Correspondent

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — Spectators and exhibitors alike got their first look at this year's show competition during the Wills 4-H/FFA Fair held last Saturday at the Montgomery County Fairgrounds.

Four-H'ers and FFA members from many parts of the state attened the fair to compete in their first shows of the season. Later in the year, the youth will compete at county fairs and at the Maryland State Fair.

This year's fair was larger than ever, with more entries in all shows over previous years. Shows included dairy cattle and steers, dairy goats, beef cattle, sheep, rabbits, small pets, dogs and poultry.

The fair is named in honor of Richard N. Wills, who for over 50 years has provided leadership that has enabled hundreds of youth and adults to participate in agricultural related events.

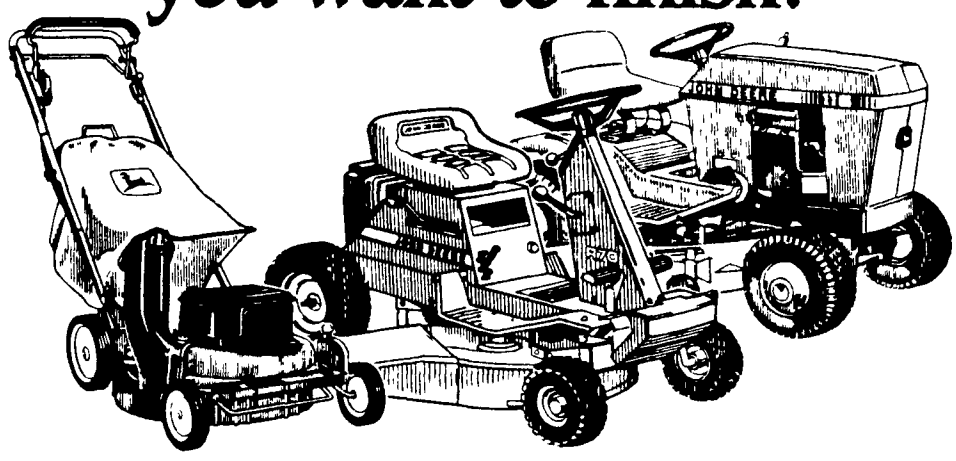
Don't delay! Come in and make the deal of your choice

Once you've decided to mow with the best, it's only a question of how fast you want to finish.



No matter what kind of lawn you have or how much time you want to spend on it, there's a dependable John Deere mower designed for the job.

If you have a lawn of a quarter acre or less, your best bet is probably a walk-behind mower. There are several models available, including the 21-inch self-propelled version. It comes with a dependable 4-hp engine, a deep die-cast aluminum deck, and rear-wheel gear drive.

If you own a larger lawn, you may prefer one of five John Deere riding mowers. even the 8-hp R70, the lowest cost model, can mow ¾ of an acre in about one hour. It has a 30-inch mower and a 5-speed shift-on-the-go gear-drive transmission. A 6½-bushel rear grass bag is optional If you mow an acre or more, a John Deere lawn tractor may be in order. The 116, for instance, with a 46-inch mower and 16-hp engine, can mow an acre of lawn in about 45 minutes.

See us today for the mowing equipment right for you.

Nutrient deficiencies in early-season plants

DEKALB, Il. – Nutrient deficiencies can rob farmers of yields and profits, says Bob McCauley, DEKALB-PFIZER GENETICS Regional Agronomist. He offers the following advice to farmers.

Growers need to identify the problem first, and can often use plant symptoms to help pin-point a nutrient deficiency problem.

Early season nutrient deficiencies of growing plants can be difficult to identify for a variety of reasons. These can include past cropping system, previous herbicide, current weather condition, and the simple fact that many of the secondary nutrient deficiency symptoms tend to look the same in small plants.

Cold weather tends to bring out the worst in most humans and, if it is cold and wet in the spring, plants don't care for it either. Plants may show deficiency symptoms even though there are adequate nutrient levels in the soil. The previous herbicide may be pruning roots – keeping them from getting to where the nutrients are located. All these points must be evaluated in determining if the problems are truly nutrient related.

• Nitrogen deficiency in corn and sorghum appears as stunted, spindly growth with the foliage being pale, yellowish green. In soybeans, yellowing will begin on the lower leaves and rapidly progress upward to the top of the plant. In alfalfa – along with the yellowing – a pinkish color may develop along the midrib of the oldest leaves. Nitrogen problems will be compounded by compacted soils and, in soybeans, where poor nodule development has occurred.

• Phosphorus deficiency in corn and sorghum is very common in cool, wet soils. Leaves turn purple and the plant is stunted. In soybeans and alfalfa the deficiency is not as well defined. Soybeans short of phosphorus will have retarded growth and small leaflets. Alfalfa roots will be restricted in growth and have a light brown color. Top growth will be stunted with stiff stems and small leaves.

• Potassium deficient corn or sorghum is typified by yellowing and dying of the leaves, beginning at the tips and progressing along the margins. In soybeans, irregular mottling occurs along the leaf margins. This mottling comes together to form a yellow margin along the leaves. Potassium deficiency in alfalfa is common. Small white spots appear on the leaf marginhs; then the areas between the spots turn yellow and die.

• In corn and sorghum, sulfur deficiencies appear as general yellowing like nitrogen deficient plants. Some yellowing may occur between leaf veins. Sulfur-deficient soybeans have small yellow to grey leaves with elongated stems. In alfalfa the deficiency looks like nitrogen deficiency. Generally sulfur shortages occur in low pH soils.

Iron deficiencies occur in high pH soils – usually 7.5 and above. Symptoms are rare in corn and alfalfa. Iron deficient soybeans result in iron chlorosis. This first appears as light yellowing of the upper leaves. Several soybean cultivars are tolerant to this condition and should be used if planting soybeans in high pH soils.

Zinc is another important nutrient to these crops. Deficiency symptoms generally occur in cool, wet soils that are high in phosphate. Young corn and sorghum plants will have shortened internodes and lack vigor. Streaking of the leaves may occur with a broad bleached strip along the midrib. Soybeans short of zinc will be stunted with yellowing between the veins. Lower leaves turn brown or grey and the leaves drop early. Alfalfa leaves will be small and will have an upward curl appearance.

While other nutrients such as manganese, magnesium, calcium, molybdenum, and boron are important to good plant growth, deficiencies occur more rarely. A soil test and plant tissue analysis should be taken to be certain of a nutrient deficiency.

Hisex trying to increase layers' disease resistance

TROUTMAN, NC – The Hisex Division of Pilch, Inc. of Troutman, North Carolina, said that breeding greater natural disease resistance into the Hisex egg layer is one of the major objectives of current Euribrid research. Pilch represents Hisex White and Hisex Brown in North America.

"Even though there are satisfactory vaccines available for most major poultry diseases, we find it highly desirable to increase the level of natural immunity in the layers," the Hisex Division of Pilch noted. "No vaccine provides full immunity for the entire life of a bird, and vaccines work more efficiently if the birds already have a degree of natural immunity."

According to Hisex, to further work with natural resistance, various challenges are used in tests carried out at special houses incorporating advanced air filtration and position pressure ventilation systems. Highly accurate immunological tests featured in this work in cooperation with sophisticated laboratories, result in a relatively fast practical application of research, the company said.

In addition to being mycoplasmas and pullorum free– Hisex Grandparents have reached a leucosis-free status, which it consider a valuable new breakthrough.

"Although good vaccines against Marek's are available, it is desirable to develop specific resistance against the disease," Hisex said. "In the past five years the poultry industry has seen what damage a sudden variant can cause."

They added that a well-equipped MHC complex in the bird supports natural resistance, although not providing a full guarantee. Studies on the use of monoclonal antibodies and determination of genes by chemical sub-division of certain markers show great promise for the future, Hisex said.

In addition to disease resistance, current research has also placed great emphasis on egg shell quality. Medium-sized and large poultry operations demand greater shell strength to cope with intensive automatic transport and collection.

"It is generally accepted that management and feeding have some influence on the frequency of cracked eggs, with proper cage design a matter of prime importance," Hisex noted. "But, the genetic background of the laying hen also plays a role. Strong selection for this trait in the last few years has resulted in a marked improvement in shell strength of eggs from Hisex layers."

The division noted that increased productivity combined with optimum egg size is still one of the main goals in breeding. To make egg production profitable, high egg mass should be combined with good feed utilization lowering feed conversion. In 1975, feed conversion for Hisex White was 4.10 lbs/doz for a laying period of 22-82 weeks compared to 3.60 lbs/doz today. Hisex is confident that this will be further reduced to 3.42 lbs/doz by 1990.

With Hisex Brown, Hisex expects production to increase by three eggs/bird/year with the present egg size. Consistent shell color has also been achieved, as a result of selection pressure to eliminate the pale colored eggs and achieve a more uniform shell color throughout the life of a flock.

For more information, contact the Hisex Division of Pilch, Inc., P.O. Box 438, Pilch Road, Troutman, North Carolina 28166-0438 or call (704) 528-4501.

Most soybean varieties now developed privately

DEKALB, Il. – If you're like most of your fellow farmers, the soybean varieties you purchased to plant this year were probably private varieties developed and produced by private seed companies.

In a survey conducted by the Iowa State University Statistical Service for the Iowa Crop Improvement Association, farmers reported that 18 percent of the soybeans they planted in 1983 were publically developed; the other 82 percent were privately developed varieties. Similar surveys by the Illinois Crop Reporting Service substantiate these findings.

"When you look at the situation in the early '70s, there were approximately 10 percent of the acres planted with private soybeans," says Gary Pepper, Extension Agronomist, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. "The 1983 crop year showed that 56 percent of the soybean acres in Illinois were planted with private varieties, blends or brands."

Dr. Keith Smith, Director of Research, American Soybean Association, adds: "In the mid-'60s, there were few private soybean breeders. The number has been increasing rapidly since that time."

Smith attributes this shift to the amount of money private companies are willing to invest in research and to the competitive varieties coming from that research.

Seed companies placed their emphasis on corn research in the 1960s, says Bob McCauley, DEKALB-PFIZER GENETICS Regional Agronomist.

"Company research stations were already established in the Corn Belt, and that's where the effort in private soybean breeding started," he observes. Private industry's interest in soybean research grew after passage of the Plant Variety Protection Act of 1970.

While bin-run beans are the private varieties' largest competitor, private varieties are growing in popularity due to higher yield performance.

Progressive research efforts by private companies have resulted in superior varieties offering growers good return on their initial seed costs as well as improved performance and profitability.

Because of the investment DEKALB-PFIZER has made in soybean research, special efforts are focused on quality assurance and conditioning.

During the growing season, the DEKALB-PFIZER production staff inspects each seed-production field at least three times to look for problems that might affect purity and seed quality.

DEKALB-PFIZER stresses the importance of clean fields and good seed-field management to ensure that the seed reaching each production plant for conditioning and bagging is top quality.

Once accepted, seed is run through several conditioning processes, including pod, stem and weed seed removal; air-screen cleaning; and spiral separating to remove non-round contaminants and shriveled seed.

Delaware eyes two noxious weeds

DOVER, DE – The Delaware Department of Agriculture is receiving comments on a proposal to add two weeds to Delaware's Noxious Weed List.

Terry D. Van Horn, State Noxious Weed Specialist, says some farmers have urged the department to designate Burcucumber, Sicyos angulatus; and Giant Ragweed, Ambrosia trifida, as noxious weeds.

If added to the list, the weeds would join Canada Thistle and Johnsongrass as prohibited weeds. Under state law, noxious weeds must not be allowed to grow over 24 inches, not allowed to seed, and an eradication program must be initiated by the landowner and the person farming the land.

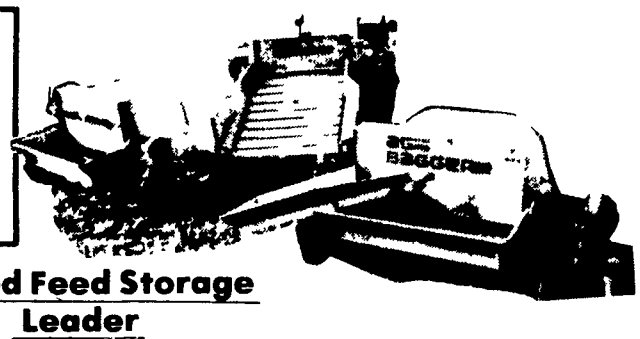
AG-BAG System Compare & SAVE



Sealed Feed Storage Leader

Better Forage At Lower Cost

Ag-Bag System gives not only lower investment and interest cost, but gives the quality forage you would expect with an oxygen limiting silo By using the Ag-Bag on a custom work basis no major capitol cost was required and the interest which was foreseen with other systems was eliminated. We would recommend the Ag-Bag System for anyone with storage shortage at a very low cost per ton of feed

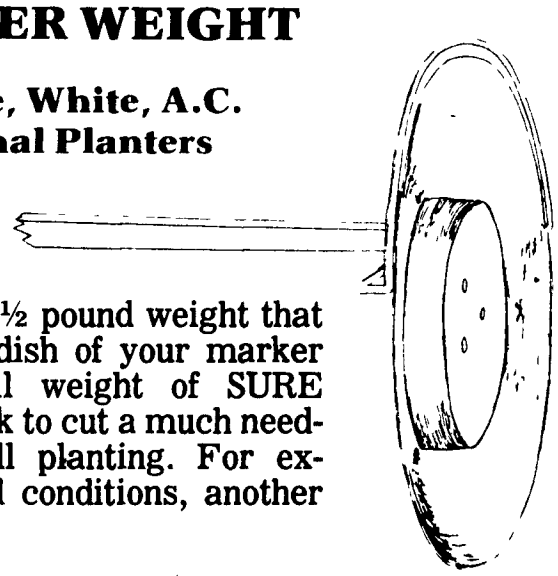
SURE MARK NO-TILL MARKER WEIGHT

For John Deere, White, A.C. & International Planters



SURE MARK is a 12½ pound weight that simply bolts in the dish of your marker disk. The additional weight of SURE MARK will assist disk to cut a much needed furrow in No-Till planting. For extremely hard No-Till conditions, another weight can be added.

DRILL SEED TUBES FOR BEANS

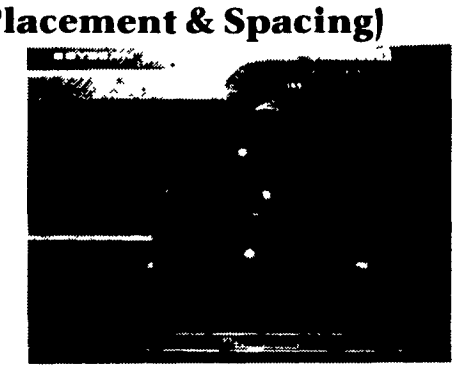
John Deere Seed Tube



International Harvester Seed Tube

Attach these drill seed tubes to your drill openers and obtain near max-emerge and early-riser planter accuracy and control. Stop wasting beans that are often found lying on top of the ground. Also improve depth placement and spacing by adding these seed tubes to your J.D. and I.H. drill.

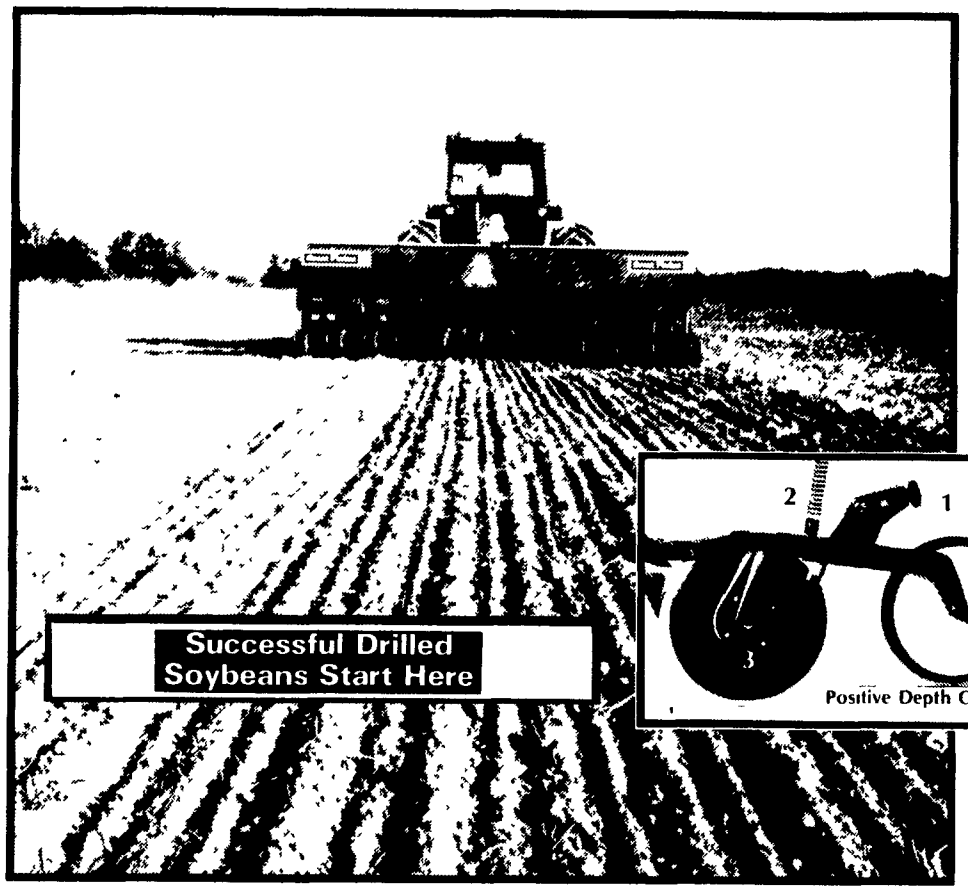
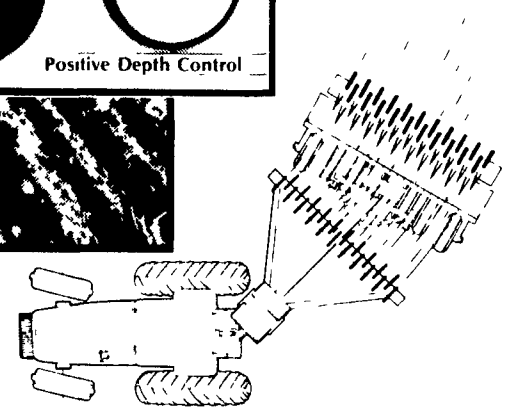
You Won't Find A Better No-Til Soybean Drill Than GREAT PLAINS



Great Plains Solid Stand drills have the planting accuracy drilled soybeans need; (1) Depth-Gauging Press Wheels keep the opener from penetrating too deep; planting depth can be quickly changed with exclusive dial-a-depth adjustment system. (2) Double Down-Pressure Springs hold opener firmly in the soil — preventing the bouncing action which leaves seed scattered on top of the ground.

(3) Special Seed Chute places seed in the very bottom of the v-slot, rather than allowing slot to partially close prior to seed release.



THE NO-TILL HITCH THAT WORKS FOR SOYBEANS

Here's why:
A unique pivot between the coulter unit and the drill allows each disk opener to track exactly in the slot cut by the coulter in front — even while the unit is rounding a curve.

Excellent penetration is also achieved, thanks to a heavy-duty framework, calcium-fillable transport tires, and a special weight transfer design which applies some of the weight of the drill itself to the coulters. Should additional weight be needed, specially designed weight brackets are available which accept most tractor suitcase-style weights. In all, up to 400 lbs. of weight per coulter is possible — ensuring penetration even in the toughest ground.

Finally, all Combination Drill Hitches feature a quick hitch for attaching easily to 3-point drills. So you have the flexibility to no-till some acreage, then switch back to a conventional seeding method as conditions vary.

COMPARE PERFORMANCE! COMPARE PRICE! YOU'LL BUY A Great Plains NO-TILL SOYBEAN DRILL

Pair a 7720 Titan II with a 200 Series Flexible Platform for top productivity

Top soybean harvests call for a top-performing harvest team — a team like the 7720 Titan II Combine and 200 Series Flexible Platform

The 7720 includes the new Harvest-Flo™ cleaning system, incorporating a longer chaffer and sieve for more crop-handling area And the shoe itself shakes 20 percent faster for more aggressive cleaning New wide-spaced duals — on 30-inch centers — give you more than 25 percent more flotation than standard tires

And built-in cutterbar flexibility saves more low-growing beans The bar floats on skid shoes through a 4-inch range to follow the land's contours And optional Dial-A-Matic™ header height control gives you on-the-go control of header ground pressure Choose a cutterbar to fit your needs, from 13 to 24 feet wide

See us today about this natural combination!

No-till skiprow planting gives Jim Plank and son Jim, Jr., higher yields and less erosion. The Westminster, Md., growers built a 12-row, 12-inch planter with 22-inch skips. Four 55-gallon drums filled with water insure sufficient coulter penetration into corn stalks or barley straw.

Since the early 1900's, Sollenberger Silos has been designing and constructing monolithic concrete silos Always concerned with quality construction, Sollenberger continuously strives to improve their products as engineers study and design new innovations for strength, utility, and efficiency.

With local dealer-representatives throughout the Mid-Atlantic area, we can continue to provide these quality silos to a large number of farmers.

Main Features of a Sollenberger Bottom Unloading Silo
- 6" Solid Concrete Wall
- No Drying Expense
- Reduced Shrinkage and Spoilage
- Continuous Filling and Feeding
- Lower Field Losses
- Lower Feed Cost

Before you buy any con crete silo, compare Sollen berger's quality construc tion and features Every Sollenberger Silo has full 6" solid steel reinforced quality controlled concrete walls Compare this with other concrete silos Our thicker stronger walls help silage remain at a relatively constant tem perature resisting freezing and heat damage resulting in less spoilage and better silage

May-Co Silo Liners

In fermenting crops, such as alfalfa, corn, sorghum and high moisture grains, certain bacteria change carbohydrates into organic acids, principally lactic and acetic acids. These acids are nature's own food preservatives and mold inhibitors When enough of these milk acids are produced, the fermentation stops and the feed is preserved. However, the bacteria that make these organic acids do not grow in the presence of oxygen The flow of oxygen can be eliminated by installing a MAY-CO SILO LINER inside your silo, which also eliminates juice run-off In an oxygen free ferment, the silage will not freeze to the silo wall, will not shrink, will not mold or heat between feeding even in hot weather, and will produce more T D N and Digestible Protein without an additive

The NEW Silo-Matic 9200 UNLOADER

SILO UNLOADERS Silo-Matic® FEEDING SYSTEMS

The main gathering auger is heavy duty 16" diameter, with 5/16" flighting mounted on a 4" tube. The auger has adjustable front and rear 14 gau. galvanized shields, for maximum capacity. The auger is powered by a 60 lb. gearbox which brings forage to the center for the delivery chain.
To deliver the high volume of forage from the sweep auger to the inside chute, a heavy duty hook chain with hardened cutters is used to convey the forage. The stainless steel top shield is easily removed to adjust the chain if needed. The plate and V pipe keep the delivery chain positioned over the inside chute in the forage.

(ATTENTION DAIRYMAN)

In today's economy stress, you must feed your cows properly.

Put in trough dividers, with fold up flaps to make easy sweeping. It prevents late lactating cows of over-eating & gives the high producers more time to eat their feed which results in more dry matter intake and more milk.

Being able to know exactly what each cow eats will be a benefit to you and the cow.

We also build self locking head gates and cattle guards, gutter grates

Two Kelly ewes top Mercer sale

MERCER – A yearling Suffolk ewe consigned by Mrs. Paul Kelly of Hartstown topped the 11th annual Western Pa. Sheep and Lamb Sale at Mercer County 4-H Park on May 11. The winning bid of $410 came from Craig Galford of Emporium, who also took home the sale's number-two animal for $225, another Kelly consignment.

Suffolk rams weren't in as great a demand as in past sales as the top selling suffolk ram brought $210, a Tom Williams, Vienna, Ohio, consignment purchased by Robert Zahniser, Sharon, Pa. Mrs. Paul Kelly sold her two rams at $200 each to Joseph B. Alackness, Roulette, Pa., and Mike Kelly, Sarver, Pa.

Targhee sheep were few in number but were in demand again this year as Glenn High's, Lexington, Ohio yearling ram was top selling ram of the sale going to Bruce Hastings, Polk, Pa., for $215. Mr. High's yearling ewe sold for $155 to Carol J. McConnell, Fredericktown, Pa.

Shropshires were down in numerous somewhat from 1984, but Glenn High's yearling ram topped the Shropshires as J.W. Percival, Painesville, Ohio purchased him for $145. Larry Snyder, Creekside, Pa., bought High's yearling ewe for $120.

A good selection of Polled Dorsets was topped by a Penn State yearling ram selling to C.O. Beatty, Emlenton, Pa., at $200.

Hampshires were well represented by some good ewes with the top selling ewe, a Hidden Valley Farms yearling ewe, going to George Marshall of Clarksburg, Pa., for $160.

Cheviot ewes sold quite well with the top selling lot being a Calvert Farm, Spraggs, Pa., entry, a ewe with twin ewe lambs, selling to Lloyd Hunter, Adamsville, Pa., at $130. George Hunter, Stoneboro, Pa., selected the other Calvert Farm ewe with twin lambs at $110.

A good group of Merino sheep was sold, with Carol J. McConnell, Fredericktown, Pa., selecting the top ewes. She purchased Kenrick & Kathy Smith's Jeromesville, Ohio fall ewe lamb at $110, and a spring-born John Holbert (Bedford) ewe lamb at $110. Top Merino ram was a growthy Merino fall ram lamb also consigned by Kenrick & Kathy Smith and selling at $130 to David Pyers, Louisville, Ohio.

Willard Berbebile & Son had the top Montadale yearling ewe selling to Strock's Sheep Farm, Southington, Ohio at $120.

Kenneth R. Moore. Rome, Pa., sold the top Rambouillet, a ewe lamb selling to Hedge Cove Farm at $135.

David Pyers, Louisville, Ohio selected the two Southern ewe lambs consigned by Glen Best, Jewett, Ohio for $125 and $85.

The 51 registered yearling ewes sold for an average of $113.52. Thirty-nine registered ewe lambs averaged $92.82; 26 registered yearling rams averaged $110.19; and 20 ram lambs averaged $75.25.

Top non-registered yearling ewe was consigned by Lisa Meyer, Eden, NY a black ewe selling for $95 to R.J. Estel, Clinton, Pa.

The 4 non-registered yearling ewes averaged $80. Non-registered ewe lambs were topped by a John Otto, Loyalhanna, PA entry of a normal horned Dorset ewe with twin lambs selling to Tracey McConn, West Alexander, Pa., at $170.

Wether lambs were in demand as the 78 wether lambs averaged $65.44 per head. A George Hunter, Suffolk lamb topped the sale with Jim Bintrim, New Cstle, paying $175 for the 65 lb. lamb.

The sale is sponsored by the Wool Growers Cooperatives of Western Pennsylvania.

NAILE announces changes in market and sheep shows

LOUISVILLE, Ky. – The 1985 North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), scheduled for November 9-22 at the Kentucky Fair & Exposition Center, will alter its market show format this year.

According to Harold Workman, General Manager of the NAILE, changes will occur in the swine and beef market shows, and a major breed expansion will take place in purebred sheep events this year.

All market shows will be junior shows in 1985, with competition open only to exhibitors 21 years of age and under. Previously, beef and sheep market shows were limited to juniors; this year swine market shows will also transfer to junior shows.

Workman noted, "This represents an equalization of all the market shows at the North American International Livestock Exposition." He added, "Transferring market shows to junior shows creates a training ground for young people which will enhance their future opportunities as livestock breeders."

Additionally, only swine carcass contests will be held in conjunction with the market shows. Beef and sheep will not be slaughtered, although arrangement assistance will be provided by the NAILE management for exhibitors who choose to take their animals to slaughter.

There will be no truckload exhibits of swine in 1985.

Due to the market show changes, only juniors will participate in the 1985 Sale of Champions. According to Workman, the Sale of Champions recognizes and rewards those breeders who are working to improve the commercial livestock business. Workman noted that this year, the grand and reserve champions in beef, sheep and swine singled out to be sold at the Sale of Champions will be only junior entries, giving full reward to the young people.

While over 50 breeds constitute the six livestock divisions shown at the NAILE, five additional breeds of sheep will also be added in 1985. According to Bobby Hall, Chairman of the North American International's Sheep Advisory Committee, Romney, Merino, Cotswold, Lincoln and Targhee breeds have been invited.

Overall, the North American International Livestock Exposition ranks as the largest all-breed, purebred livestock show in the world. More than 12,500 livestock entries will compete for over $300,000 in premiums during the two-week run of events in November.

Horse jump plans available

NEWARK, Del. – Horse owners who need to replace worn out jumps, or who are new to the sport and want to get animals ready for the summer's hunter/jumper show classes, can build their own jumps with plans from the USDA Plan Service.

Plan 6014 illustrates how to build six different types of jumps. According to University of Delaware extension agricultural engineer Dr. Jim Scarborough, all the jumps are a standard 10-foot width and constructed primarily of 2 by 4 and 1 by 6 lumber. Posts and rails for rail jumps are 4 by 4s.

Blueprints of this four-page plan are available for $2 by writing: Extension Agricultural Engineer–Plan Service, 058 Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303. Make checks payable to the University of Delaware. Be sure to specify Plan 6014, Horse Jumps.

National Poultry Improvement Plan updates disease control procedures

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The National Poultry Improvement Plan has updated procedures for controlling poultry diseases, according to an official of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"The National Poultry Improvement Plan is designed to improve poultry, poultry products and hatcheries through better breeding practices and control of poultry diseases," said Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Hawkins said the Plan helps control diseases by officially recognizing flocks, hatcheries and dealers that meet the Plan's disease-control standards.

The Plan is funded principally by states and industry. Since the Plan is voluntary, its rules apply only to participating hatcheries, breeders and dealers. the new changes in the Plan are:

– establishment of criteria for classifying turkey breeding flocks as Mycoplasma synoviae-clean;

– allowance of classifying breeding flocks of waterfowl and exhibition poultry as pullorum-typhoid clean with less than an annual test of 300 birds under certain conditions;

– establishment of criteria for classifying states as Mycoplasma gallisepticum-clean for meat-type chickens;

– establishment of criteria for allowing egg yolk testing as a monitoring test for mycoplasma infections in multiplier chicken breeding flocks;

– allowance of the use of the ELISA test and other tests for monitoring mycoplasma infections in chicken and turkey breeding flocks;

– recognition of the Arizona group of bacteria as part of the Salmonella family;

Japan imports U.S. bull semen

DeFOREST, Wisc. – Ten years of lobbying by the National Association of Animal Breeders, American Breeders Service and others has resulted in Japan opening its market to American dairy and beef semen, reports Greg Cuppan, of ABS, DeForest, Wisc.

ABS semen, the first to be released from quarantine, was recently distributed to Japanese farmers, says Cuppan, "its arrival received a good deal of very favorable fanfare from the Japanese media."

Cuppan points out that there are some restrictions on the free flow of semen to Japan due to the fact that shipments can be brought into that country only twice a year. The Japanese Livestock Semen Import Council (JLSIC) is a quasi-governmental organization through which all imports of U.S. semen must pass. This tends to significantly increase the cost of the semen over the U.S. domestic price, but, notes Cuppan, "that hasn't dampened the demand."

Japanese farmers like the American semen because it comes from progency-tested bulls, Cuppan explains. Japan doesn't have a national program to evaulate genetic merit such as the Sire Evaluation program administered by USDA. This first shipment included semen from eleven Holstein bulls at ABS.

Cuppan, who worked for a year on a Japanese dairy farm, reports that the average-size Japanese dairy operation has about 20 cows. The larger farms have up to 50 cows. He says Japan has imported live dairy cattle from the United States and Canada in sizable numbers since 1970.

Communicate with your lender

The livestock industry is currently feeling the slump of low cattle and hog prices. This, along with the busy planting season with its associated costs, may find some farmers short of funds. This often warrants a visit to a lender to ease a tough situation until prices improve.

Communication between borrower and lender has always been important and with the current financial crunch in farming it is crucial. The survival of your farming operation may depend on how well you are able to communicate with your lender. At the same time the continued existence of your lender may depend on how well he or she comunicates with you. Today's financial situation in agriculture increases the dependence of the farm operator on the lender and vice versa.

It is esential that both borrower and lender understand that communication involves at least two parties. In dealing with credit problems it is important for both to recognize that information supplied by each party must be complete and as accurate as possible. Often in the past communication between lender and borrower was so limited that each operated with only little knowledge of what was needed and desired by the other party. It is essential for farm borrowers to establish a good relationship with their lender, a relationship which involves trust and confidence, and which will help the lender understand why, when a note or mortgage payment is late.

Because communication with your lender is a two-way street, your lender should tell you exactly what the conditions of a loan are, what will happen if you are unable to meet a payment and when your line of credit is fully extended.

The key to successful financial management when using borrowed funds is to communicate with your lender. Remember, your lender is as concerned with your success as you are. Use your lender as a resource person and seek his or her help when you are considering a capital investment or when faced with a financial problem. Remember, your lender is a financial specialist--so communicate and take advantage of his or her experience.

Embryo transfer may reduce spread of infectious diseases

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The danger of transmitting some diseases through trade in livestock may one day cease to trouble livestock breeders and exporters, thanks to new research supported by USDA's Office of International Cooperation and Development.

USDA is conducting cooperative research with Yugoslavia and Pakistan to determine if embryo transfer is a viable disease-free method for exporting breeding materials.

Preliminary research has shown that certain infectious diseases are not likely to be transmitted by embryos, opening up several interesting possibilities for trade. For example, by using embryo transfer a country that has diseased animals might still be able to transfer breeding material to another country without the fear of transmitting disease. Embryo transfer might also enable scientists to preserve blood lines while they attempt to eradicate a livestock disease.

Embryo transfer is also better than artificial insemination for upgrading indigenous stock in developing countries. Not only is it faster, but an imported embryo transferred to a surrogate mother gains immunity to native diseases from the mother.

Until recently, scientists have not done much research on whether diseases can be transmitted through livestock embryos, but the topic has now become high priority for USDA veterinarians interested in controlling diseases transmitted through international trade. Under its international research grant program, OICD is sponsoring a cattle embryo transfer project in Pakistan.

Dr. John McVicar of the Agricultural Research Service (ARS) and Dr. John Acree of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) will cooperate with Pakistani scientists on the project. Dr. Acree will also work with Yugoslav scientists on similar research with swine embryos.

According to Dr. Jerry Walker of OICD, these 5-year research projects will seek to confirm that 20 major livestock diseases cannot be transmitted through embryo transfer. Scientists will select embryos from mothers that are the best genetic specimens, regardless of whether they are diseased. They will then implant the embryos in surrogate mothers held in quarantine. Mothers and offspring will then be checked for the presence of disease.

Dr. Walker believes the results of these experiments will enable government quarantine officials to draft new regulations for international trade within a few years. These regulations would take into account the proven safety of embryo transfer, opening up new possibilities for U.S. livestock exporters.

Poultry industry made money on avian flu, researcher says

SHAMOKIN DAM — The poultry industry as a whole made more money than it lost during the 1983-84 avian flue epidemic, Dr. Tony Stemberger, Professor of Agricultural Economics at The Pennsylvania State University, told a select group of industry people recently at the Poultry Servicemen's Seminar here. Headed; however that individual poultry-men, processors and marketers directly affected by the flu did lose a great deal of money.

The long range outlook on eggs is not optimistic, he noted. Egg producers have been losing a great deal of money for almost a year. Prices may not improve to profitable levels until November of '85, and then only if layer numbers are reduced. He said fowl price is up and if 1-2 per-cent of old fowl were sold to processing plants immediately, instead of being molted, prices would improve more quickly.

Stemberger said Pennsylvania could lead the way because the state leads the nation in production performance, based on the records on all production parameters. Pennsylvania has competent poultry people, he said.

The good news, he said, is that the long range outlook on broilers and turkeys is good. Per capita beef and pork consumption will continue to decrease whereas broiler and turkey consumption will increase slowly. He said cold storage of turkey is down, while poult placements are up only 1% over last year.

Turkey consumption should be adequate for 1985 and price of turkey reasonably strong.

He said that although broiler production is now up and prices down, this situation will reverse and broilers may finish 1985 strong.

Herb Jordan, Extension Specialist in Poultry Science at Penn State, added that he would encourage egg producers to cull every layer producing between 0-50 percent production and keep all layers producing between 50 and 100% production. This could help improve net income on each farm.

USDA approves two substances for meat

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Effective July 12, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will permit the use of two substances for meat that are generally recognized as safe for use in other foods by the Food and Drug Administration.

Under the new regulations, meat packers can spray freshly dressed carcasses with an edible coating that reduces water loss and shrinkage, and meat processors can use agar-agar as a stabilizer and thickener in canned, jellied meat products.

"The meat spray offers other benefits to industry as well," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "It slows surface deterioration of meat, improves the surface for later grade marking and eliminates the need to cover carcasses with expensive fabric coating."

The spray consists of water, corn syrup solids, sodium alginate, calcium chloride and sodium carboxymethylcellulose. The spray ingredients are all classified as safe for use in food by the Food and Drug Administration.

"Research to develop an edible, moisture-retaining spray has been in progress for over 10 years with USDA as an active participant," Houston said. "We have reviewed the materials, procedures and test results and found the process to be acceptable for commercial use."

The spray can be used only in proper amounts—when dry, it must account for less than two-tenths of 1 percent of carcass weight. Also, any carcass sprayed with the protective coating will be marked to indicate its use and the spray ingredients.

Houston said agar-agar, a gelling agent, also is classified as safe by the Food and Drug Administration. "We've reviewed analytical data indicating that agar-agar can be safely used in canned, jellied meat products," he said.

Agar-agar, which is derived from seaweed, currently is used only as a packing jelly in such meat products as canned beef tongue to maintain product uniformity during shipping and handling.

Although USDA is not requesting comments on either action, additional information on each may be sent by July 12 to: FSIS Regulations Office, Room 2637 South Building, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

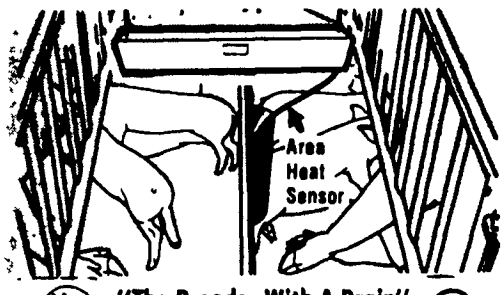
Temperature Controlled
INFRARED HEATERS



"The Brooder With A Brain"
it thinks for itself

NO OVERHEATING—NO CHILLING: A solid-state control and sensor act better than a brooder thermostat to automatically regulate radiant heat output to within ±½° of setting.

SAVE PIGS—REDUCE PILING: Pigs spread out comfortably under blanket of infrared heat.

SAVE ENERGY, TIME, LABOR: Downgoing infrared heats pigs, not the air. Set automatic control and forget it; sensor allows constant temperature below heater. Controlled infrared is the most economical form of clean electric heat. No moisture or carbon monoxide produced as with gas heaters!

VARIOUS MODELS: Choose individually controlled heaters or a centrally controlled system, automatic or manual regulation. Kalglo heaters have durable metal sheath heat elements (no glass tubes to break) and come ready to plug in and use. Larger models also available for nursery and finishing pens.

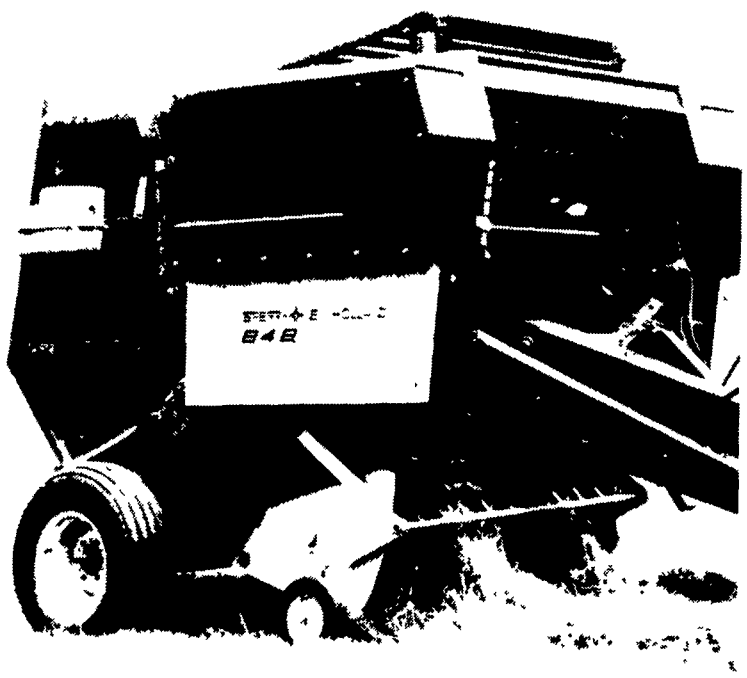
Sperry's $100 'showdown'



Sperry New Holland is offering to pay $100 to every hay grower who buys a round baler (any company's round baler), if that farmer attends a demonstration of a Sperry New Holland round baler in action before he buys. The May 1 through September 30 offer is available through participating Sperry New Holland dealers. Company officials said that, in trials agains competitor round balers, New Holland's balers have shown an impressive productivity "edge". The company markets four models, for a wide range of round bale size needs – from 850 to 2,300 lb. bales – and for field capacities of from 10 to 18 tons per hour.

'85 equipment sales bleak, say manufacturers

WASHINGTON, – The year 1985 seems like one year farm equipment manufacturers would like to put behind them soon, according to survey results released today.

Manufacturers of farmstead equipment predict their 1985 sales will fall 5 percent below 1984's figures. And manufacturers of tractors and other heavy equipment see no gain in 1985.

The results, in the May update of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute's State of the Industry report, were released at FIEI's annual spring Marketing and Management Conference in Washington, D.C.

The current high value of the U.S. dollar and its depressing effects on commodity exports is a chief reason for the sober predictions, according to the manufacturers surveyed.

FIEI member companies provided all figures for the survey. The Institute, founded in 1893, is the major trade association representing manufacturers of farm and industrial equipment in North America.

All percentage changes noted in the report are for units sold and not for dollars.

Sales are anticipated to be strongest for grain bins, grinder mixers, lawn and garden equipment and in parts. The weakest sales are anticipated in four-wheel drive farm tractors and in forage harvesters.

TRACTORS

Manufacturers expect all tractor horsepower classes to show a sales dip in 1985 and a modest rebound in 1986.

Four-wheel tractors are expected to post the sharpest decline for the rest of 1985 with a nearly 12 percent decrease predicted.

But this class of tractors will turn in the largest sales increase in 1986, recovering by 8.6 percent.

Overall, manufacturers predict sales for tractors will drop by more than 3,000 units in 1985. However, by 1986, annual sales will reach 117,000–slightly below 1984's figure of 117,734.

GRAIN HARVESTING EQUIPMENT

Member companies predict sales of self-propelled combines will drop by 8 percent from 1984 to 1985. In 1986, however, manufacturers expect to recoup about half of the sales decline, reaching 11,000 units sold in that year.

By 1986, member companies predict sales will remain about 39 percent of 1981's sales figures.

TILLAGE EQUIPMENT

Members forecast declines in sales of all major pieces of tillage equipment–moldboard plows, disk harrows and field cultivators. They expect no change in 1985 chisel plow sales from 1984. But chisel plow sales should lead the tillage equipment sales recovery in 1986, with a 6 percent increase from 1985.

HAY AND FORAGE EQUIPMENT

Manufacturers of hay and forage equipment report that they are in for more hard times in the remainder of 1985. They predict sales of forage harvesters will fall to 2,950 units in 1985, less than one-third the sales of forage harvesters in 1981.

Sales for balers producing bales lighter than 200 pounds will see a 6.8 percent decline in 1985 to 7,750 units, manufacturers predict. They see a slight 2.6 percent increase in sales for 1986. Sales for balers producing bales heavier than 200 pounds will fare slightly better, declining by 2 percent in 1985.

CROP DRYERS

Crop dryer manufacturers, see 1985 as a year for stability in sales. Sales for both in-bin and batch/continuous-flow crop dryers will show no change from 1984's levels, according to manufacturers surveyed. Only in-bin crop dryeers are expected to show a slight increase (2 percent in 1986).

AUGERS, ELEVATORS AND GRAIN BINS

Grain bin sales for 1985 will exceed 1984 sales by 2.5 percent, manufacturers predict. In fact, they say, grain bin sales for 1986 will expand another 1.5 percent. No significant changes are expected for sales of elevators and augers.

MILKING MACHINES

Though the possibility of reduced government support for dairy farmers spurred milking machine manufacturers to predict a 5 percent drop in their sales before the year began, they have revised their predictions upward. Manufacturers surveyed see no change in sales levels from 1984 to 1985.

FARMSTEAD MECHANIZATION EQUIPMENT

Sales are seen remaining flat in 1985 and in 1986 for dairy and beef mechanization equipment.

The May update of the 1985 State of the Industry report are available from FIEI at 410 N. Michigan Avenue, Suite 680, Chicago, IL 60611.

New modular pickup ramp introduced

LINCOLN, Ne. – A new, modular design pickup ramp has been introduced by American Road Equipment Company.

Made of tough, galvanized steel formed for maximum strength and rigidity, the patent-pending AMERIRAMP™ is available in sizes to fit full-size pickups, compact long-bed pickups, and compact and sub-compact pickups.

The AMERIRAMP is built in modular sections so the pickup owner can install only the number of sections he needs. The standard models are 16 inches wide per section, in lengths of 96, 81 or 72 inches, depending on pickup bed size. A commercial version, the Model HD AMERIRAMP, is manufactured of heavy-duty galvanized steel and comes in 24-inch wide sections. The user can install one or two sections in a full-size 8-foot pickup bed.

The AMERIRAMP is engineered with a ramp housing that bolts into the pickup bed, or is secured by an optional universal locking bar which requires no drilling. The ramp sections slide into the housing for storage and transport. The ramp housing serves as a pickup bed protector, adding only 3 inches to floor height, as well as providing the self-storing feature.

For loading and unloading, the tailgate is lowered to normal "open" position, and the ramp sections are pulled out. A special tailgate protector/ramp extension pulls out automatically as each ramp section is pulled out. This ramp extension protects the tailgate, and makes for a smoother transition between the ramp incline and the pickup bed when loading and unloading.

Another feature of the AMERIRAMP is that it can be used in an "up" incline position, for loading into the pickup bed from a higher level such as a warehouse dock. Plus, ramp sections can be lifted up and out to remove them from the ramp housing, and used in other locations such as from a sidewalk or driveway up steps into a house, store or office building.

When extended from the pickup bed, the standard size AMERIRAMP provides a full 8-foot ramp surface, with an approximate 17-degree incline. This makes loading and unloading easier, and heavy equipment or objects can usually be loaded or off-loaded by the pickup driver without additional help. A winch can be mounted in the pickup bed if necessary for loading and unloading heavy objects.

The AMERIRAMP is ideal for loading and carrying recreational vehicles, lawn tractors and equipment, mowers, tillers, snowthrowers, welders, air compressors and other equipment. With a dolly or handcart, appliances, feed and other bulky objects can be loaded and unloaded more conveniently. A choice of electric or mechanical winch kits is available as an accessory, to provide loading assistance.

For a free color brochure and details on the new AMERIRAMP, write to Sales Department, American Road Equipment Co., 4201 N. 26th St., Omaha, NE 68111. Telephone (402) 451-2575.

Deep tillage attachment for soil saver

A new deep tillage attachment for the Glencoe® Soil Saver is now available. The DT-II Deep-Til attachment enables primary tillage and deep tillage operations to be accomplished in one operation, penetrating hardpan, improving soil management and eliminating the need of owing a sub-soiler. The Deep-Til shanks operate up to seven inches deeper than Soil Saver shanks or can be raised out of the ground so the Soil Saver can be used without the Deep-Til engaged. Features include a Glencore filled four inch square tube frame for added weight which allows deeper penetration and 1-inch-by-2-inch Adjusto-Pitch® shanks with 34½-foot underframe clearance for trash flow. Depth is easily adjusted and controlled by use of ratchet jack or hydraulic cylinders. The new rear mounted Deep-Til attachment is available for both stretch and non-stretch Soil Savers from 5 shank thru 13 shank.

Purina claims less nursery time with new pig starter chow

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Weaned from their mothers and put in a nursery, starter pigs may be prone to a variety of growth-stunting problems that can slow them down for life, says John Hess of Hess Mills in Paradise. "But many of these problems could be averted if their nutritional needs are met early," he declares.

Starter pigs may have trouble adjusting to solid rations after sow's milk, the Purina dealer explains. "They're also under stress from mingling with other pigs in a new environment and have little body fat or antibodies to prevent disease." According to USDA statistics, Hess points out, the result of these combined problems is a death loss exceeding 4 percent nationally.

And pigs that don't die aren't exempt from other problems later, he adds. "Pigs that survive disease can suffer from morbidity, or just get off to a slow start that shows up at market time. In fact, one day lost before a pig reaches 50 pounds can mean a two-day loss at market time."

A critical factor affecting starter pig health is nutrition, the dealer says. "These animals have small stomachs, and can't always eat enough conventional rations to prevent problems," he explains. "For this reason, we recommend balanced, high energy rations that provide nutrients in a denser form to get pigs started on the right growing track."

To meet starter pig nutritional needs, Purina Mills has recently introduced High Octane FastStart Pig Starter Chow, the dealer announces. "This complete feed has the highest concentration of nutrients and energy of any ration on the market. The result is that pigs get through the nursery two days faster. Feed costs may be reduced even further because the new ration's Etts (or crumbles) form minimizes feed waste."

Ford improves hydraulics on TW tractor

A completely new hydraulic system has been added to Ford's husky over-100-horsepower TW Series agricultural tractors for 1985. The new system allows operators to more easily handle heavier jobs. Features include new closed-center remote-control valves; a stronger three-point hitch; finer increments of lift; new lever-operated breakaway couplers; a new 9-GPM auxiliary pump — increasing capacity from 15.3 to 24.3 gallons per minute on TW 5, 15 (shown above) and 25 models and 20 to 29 gallons per minute on the TW 35 model, and new dealer-installed auxiliary lift rams — increasing lift capacity from 7150 to 9450 pounds on the Category II hitch and from 7000 to 9228 on the Category III hitch.

Scientists report findings at Pfizer Conference

MINNEAPOLIS, – Leading researchers summarized significant developments in animals and poultry nutrition and disease research for more than 600 scientists and feed-industry personnel attending the 33rd Annual Pfizer Research Conference here.

Dr. E.T. Kornegay, professor of animal nutrition, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, reported on the effects of several dietary supplements in swine diets. "Supplemental biotin apparently improves the reproductive performance of breeding swine," he said. "Selenium supplementation, though necessary for weanling pigs, must be watched carefully because of possible toxicity problems." Dr. Kornegay also indicated that the need for supplemental vitamin C and high levels of calcium and phosphorus in the diets of weanling pigs and developing gilts now appears unlikely or questionable.

Dr. Werner G. Bergen, professor of animal science, Michigan State University, reported on protein supplied by rumen fermentation in cattle. "When a cow's daily milk production is below 45 lbs. and daily gains of growing beef cattle are below 2.0 - 2.3 lbs., rumen fermentation supplies adequate protein to the animal," he said. "However, higher-producing ruminants require all microbial protein produced by ruminal fermentation, plus substantial amounts of dietary protein that escapes ruminal breakdown."

Dr. Joseph H. Soares Jr., professor of nutrition, department of poultry science, University of Maryland, said that while the hormone calcitriol is necessary to maintain normal calcium metabolism in poultry, it also can produce problems. "If hens are fed only calcitriol, they will not demonstrate normal egg hatchability," he stated. "The vitamin D deficient egg will cause abnormal calcification and development of the embryonic beak which, in turn, seems to be caused by inadequate transfer of calcitriol to the egg." Dr. Soares' research shows that hens produce high levels of calcitriol during shell calcification periods, and that there is a direct correlation between concentrations of the hormone and egg-shell thickness.

Dr. Harold F. Hintz, professor of animal nutrition, Cornell University, reported that vitamin K administered to race horses to prevent lung hemorrhage during races can cause serious kidney problems for the animals. "Research with experimental animals demonstrates that vitamin K, used at manufacturers' recommended dosages, can cause colic, bloody urine or urination difficulties for horses," he said. "Such kidney damage could be more serious than lung hemorrhage." Dr. Hintz also reported that use of acetic or propionic acid as a forage preservative offers many benefits.

Dr. Robert E. Carlson, director of research and technical services, Pfizer Inc., reported that studies in horses and ponies indicate that continous feeding of pyrantel tartrate (Banminth) can prevent verminous arteritis caused by migration of strongylus vulgaris larvae, and also remove pre-existing gastrointestinal nematode infections from large and small strongyles, roundworms and pinworms. "Feeding Banminth as a complete sweet feed or as a medicated top dress poses no threat to breeding safety in mares and stallions and is safe for suckling foals," he said. In swine, Banminth-medicated feeds provide the only protection against liver and lung disease caused by migration of roundworm larvae, Dr. Carlson reported.

The Pfizer Research Conference is held annually in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Feed Manufacturers Association. It features leading university authorities, who review and report on the prior year's work in animal and poultry nutrition and disease research.

Manufacturers can now mix MGA and Rumensin in feed

KALAMAZOO, MI — Feed manufacturers may now produce and sell a single product containing the feed additives MGA and Rumensin, thanks to a recent FDA approval which allows the two additives to be used in the manufacture of combination supplements.

This approval follows an earlier FDA clearance for the combination feeding of MGA and Rumensin to beef heifers. This earlier clearance, announced in late 1984, required that the MGA/Rumensin combination feed be prepared from separate feed sources.

As a result, the MGA and the Rumensin mixed in the final feed had to come from different supplements — or, as another alternative, MGA could be added to a complete feed already medicated with Rumensin.

"With this new clearance, feed manufacturers will be able to mix MGA and Rumensin together in a combination supplement and deliver the supplement to the feed lot for incorporation into the feed there," explains Bill Greve, product manager for The Upjohn Company, which manufactures MGA. "The new clearance will eliminate mixing hassles for the feedlot operator — and it will allow the feed manufacturer to market a 'new' supplement which contains the two additives," he adds.

MGA-medicated feed supplements, when fed alone, are approved to be fed at the rate of 0.25 - 0.50 mg. melengestrol acetate per head per day. If MGA is to be fed at the same time as Rumensin, whether provided from separate feed sources or contained in the same supplement, the approved range for melengestrol acetate is 0.25 - 0.40 mg. per head per day.

Feed containing the two additives must be withdrawn 48 hours before slaughter. Feedlot operat . . feed manufacturers must have an appr. ed FD 1800 to formulate supplements containing both drugs.

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops

New tool is shredder, chipper, grinder

WICHITA, KN — Shredder, grinder, and chipper features are now included in one gardening tool — the new Renegade 250 produced by W-W Grinder. It helps keep a garden attractive and at the same time recycles valuable waste materials.

The Renegade 250's 30"x33" hopper with optional roller-rods will shred anything from kitchen scraps to leaves. The resulting mulch helps to grow healthier plants and flowers.

Also, the Renegade 250 grinds all types of organic waste into rich compost material. It grinds animal feeds, bedding, and pruning clippings with 14 reversible, fixed, carbon steel hammers. It also chips limbs up to 3" in diameter, reducing them in seconds to decorative mulch in the cone-shaped chipper chute.

Additional features of the Renegade 250 include fixed, steel hammers that are reversible and have tilt back access, making the clipper blade, screen, and hammers easier to reach. The machine comes with a five horsepower Briggs & Stratton engine.

Neutralizing Acidity

Farmers who have high-producing dairy cattle may benefit from adding a little sodium bicarbonate to the animals' corn silage. Animal scientists at the University of Maryland found that neutralizing the natural acidity in corn silage they fed dairy cattle increased the animals' intake of silage. The treatment had the most effect on high-producing cows. It had no effect on poor producers.

Stores warned not to sell processing grade potatoes

HARRISBURG – The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is cautioning managers of wholesale and retail stores in Pennsylvania against selling or advertising processing grade potatoes for retail consumption, according to Acting Agriculture Secretary George G. Grode.

"Potatoes packed in bags marked 'Maine Processing Grade For Processing Use Only' may have been shipped to retail outlets in the state in violation of the Pennsylvania Marketing Law," said Grode. "The official standards for potatoes permitted for sale in Pennsylvania are the 'United States Grades,'" he added.

"Maine Processing Grade" potatoes are off-grade potatoes intended strictly for use in processing plants, and never for consumer use. Consumers are advised to notify the Department of possible violations of the law by calling the Bureau of Markets, Fruits & Vegetable Division, at 717-787-3294.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

American agriculture is still in business. That's my conclusion after a firsthand look at a lot of farm country during a 4,000-mile motor trip to Albuquerque, New Mexico, and back.

I make this trip annually, usually in the spring, to visit my mother who chose that city many years ago because of its ideal climate. Granted, Albuquerque is a nice big town spread out in a great big valley with lots of people, most of them from the East, and weather that's a cut or two better than this area.

During my brief visit, the sun was always shining, temperatures were in the mid 80s, and the humidity was at an unbelievable 11 percent. And they tell me that's usual for this time of year.

From an agricultural point of view, I found New Mexico pretty barren. There just isn't enough rain to grow many crops. Where there's irrigation, things do well and, of course, that low humidity makes the ideal hay production. But all in all, it's a little too dry for me.

On the other hand, April in Missouri was a beautiful experience. Adequate rainfall and the advancing spring had turned everything a beautiful green.

I was amazed, traveling across the southern part of Missouri, at the miles and miles of pastureland visible from the highway. There were some herds of beef cattle, a small amount of dairying, and thousands of acres of grassland.

I scarcely saw a plowed field in more than 300 miles. Quite a contrast to the Delmarva peninsula where you hardly see any grassland at all.

Maybe it's the economic times, or perhaps the wisdom of the Missouri farmers that's telling them to graze those rolling, erodible acres and leave the row-crop farming to somebody else.

It's a much less concentrated kind of agriculture – no long chicken houses, no big dairy farms with expensive blue silos, just small rolling farms with plenty of pasture, some hay ground, a few beef cows, or maybe a small dairy herd. I suspect a lot of those farmers gain most of thier income from off-farm employment.

While the Ozarks have gained a national reputation for hillbillies, folklore, country music and rugged individuals, it is a beautiful place with its own kind of farming.

True, part of the Ozarks is rough timberland which will support very little of what we call agriculture. And there's another part which thrives on tourism, including float trips, canoe rides, dude ranches and all those touristy kinds of places complete with water slides, wax museums and pizza parlors.

But then there are lots and lots of good, solid livestock farms scattered over rolling hills and river valleys. They're too small for corporate takeover and of little interest to foreign investors. Those farms are too small and too rolling ever to become big crop producers, and they don't lend themselves very well to big equipment and efficient mechanization.

But go east or west a few hundred miles and the big farms abound. East and west of Amarillo, Texas, fields were so big you could hardly find a fence line. Huge tractors pulling a conglomeration of tillage machines faded off into the distance, almost disappearing before they reached the end of a furrow.

Farmers in that part of America are in pretty serious financial trouble this spring, many of them unable to meet the challenge of putting in another crop. And while the government, in its many forms, struggles with the agricultural dilemma, the time to plant is at hand. It seemed to me that all the land would be tilled by someone, even if some farmers were failing.

The annual planting ritual was getting under way in Illinois also. The season seemed a little late, at least compared to Delmarva standards, with farmers struggling with wet ground in many parts of central and souther Illinois. But again, they were out there getting organized, doing what they could to prepare for another season.

It's a marvel to me, as I cross this great country, to observe how the farming continues. Good years and bad, economic disasters notwithstanding, the farming continues.

You might think that in their wisdom, some farmers might just say the heck with it and not plant anything, but it doesn't work that way.

Some fall by the wayside and others take their places. Some cut back on their acreage, but still the land gets farmed. Some farmers go deeper in debt just to meet the challenge, with the hope that his year will be a little better.

And maybe it will. That's the hope that keeps them going. That, and dedication to the way of life that is farming to hundreds of thousands of Americans scattered across this vast land.

The differences are so obvious between the rough, barren acres of eastern New Mexico and the high plains wheat farming in Texas, the small rolling livestock farms of the Missouri Ozarks and the black-land corn and soybean acres of Illinois.

These farmers are producing our food, and they need our support and understanding. They need a farm bill that makes sense, and they need a little stability from the financial sector and a little hope from the world market.

Yes, agriculture is still in business despite the bankruptcies and the going-out-of business sales There is still a viable agricultural industry across this great land, one that will probably again produce more food than can be marketed at a reasonable return.

Tillage booklet

FORT DODGE, IA – "Is PAT For You?" is a new eight-page pamphlet, with answers to the most common questions about the new one-pass tillage system called "Precision Applied Tillage."

The author, Dr. Albert Trouse, one of the nation's leading agronomists, explains why the PAT system increases yields while reducing tillage and production expenses, soil erosion and the possibility of drought and flood damage. He also explains why the Bush Hog Ro-Till tillage tool – invented by a farmer – makes the system commercially available after 30 years of development and testing on farms.

Three bulls enter Atlantic Breeders' program

LANCASTER – Atlantic Breeders Cooperative recently selected three Holstein bulls for the stud's young sire proving program. These new additions join over 250 other top bulls currently in the program at the Lancaster facilities.

Robert Henry of Union City is the breeder of Ro-Ka-H Tony Jake-ET, a Marshfield Elevation Tony son. Tony is out of a VG-88 Ivanhoe Star with production credits to 10-0Y 365D 35,414M 3.9% 1,373F Her January 1984 cow index is +981M +38F.

Dale Peifer of Kirkwood sends a Sweet-Haven Tradition son to the program. 15H606 Joy-Dale Tradition JR-ET's dam is a 88-point Conductor daughter with lactation credits to 5-1Y 305D 24,160M 3.6% 860F.

Richlawn Ford Maverick comes to Atlantic from Robert and Rodney Smyser of York. Coded 15H630 Maverick, he is a son of I-O-State Chief Ford. The dam of this promising young bull is a VG-87 Sidney with three records over 30,000 pounds of milk and 1,000 pounds of butterfat.

General Manager Harry Roth points out these bulls will be randomly-mated by artificial insemination to approximately 600 cows on official test in the herds of Atlantic members. Upon entering the milking strings in these herds, their daughters will be evaluated for production and overall body conformation. The satisfactory results of these evaluations will bring the bulls into the active sire line-up at the stud.

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

Dairy farmers shipping to Order 2 handlers in April finally caught up with the national trend toward increasing milk production over a year ago. During the last half of 1984 production was down four percent under 1983, but starting in January it started creeping up, until March was only 1.5 percent less than last year.

Now the April figures show that you went over the top with an increase of more than one percent over a year ago with total shipments to Order 2 handlers hitting 1,005 million pounds. That was only nine million pounds or less than one percent below your peak of 1,014 million for April 1983, the highest for the month in Order 2 in 18 years.

Looking at April milk shipments in Order 2 since 1982 you get a good picture of the production yo-yo that does nothing good for anyone from the producer to the consumer. That peak in April 1983 was five percent or 47 million pounds more than you shipped in 1982. Then in April 1984 you dropped two per cent or 20 million pounds under 1983 and now you're selling over one per cent or 11 million pounds more than last April.

Seasonal variation in production has long been a problem in Order 2 but lately it has approached the ridiculous. Look for a proposal to start a base-excess seasonal incentive program in Order 2 to replace the Louisville Plan.

Part of the reason for the increased production in Order 2 was in a new record you set in April. For the first time in any month the average daily shipments per farm went over 2,000 pounds. The exact amount was 2,022 pounds per day, which was 61 pounds more than last April and 101 pounds more than April 1983 when you last peaked in Order 2.

Part of the reason for the increase in the average shipments per farm was a decrease in the number of farms from 16,901 last April to 16,570 this year in Order 2. The trend toward fewer and larger dairy farms has been happening for 50 years.

Equally important, however, is the increase in production per cow. That too, has been happening for 50 years or more but fluctuates from month to month with the price of milk and feed. With milk prices down 17 cents from last April and 66 cents less than 1983 that wouldn't encourage production. However, with corn prices down 70 cents a bushel from last year and soybean oil meal down about $70 a ton on the average, that may have helped to increase production.

The end of the milk diversion program on March 31 also had some impact, of course, but you were building up to this new production level since January, so you can't give all the blame to the diversion program participants. Include whatever reasons you want for the increase, but the bottom line is the fact that you're rapidly returning to the production levels of 1983. And unless you can get another three percent increase in consumption to match the gains made in 1984, you will be, once again, at the mercy of the price support program.

More Milk-
Higher Prices

If you aren't careful when you get your check for April milk shipments this month, you may conclude that all this increase in milk production has really given you better prices so let's increase some more. With the end of the milk diversion program in March we also got the end of the 50-cent assessment to finance it. While the March blend price in Order 2 was $12.64, you got only $12.14 after the 50-cent assessment was deducted. The blend price for March will be $12.19 without any assessment, so your check should look better than last month.

The truth is, however, that the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price dropped 33 cents in April to $11.62, dragging your Class II price down 37 cents and the Class I price down 19 cents from last month. Since January the M-W has dropped 88 cents, and $1.10 since it peaked last November at $12.72. The blend price for April at $12.19, the lowest since 1980, was 45 cents less than March and 19 cents less than last April. The Louisville Plan take-out of 30 cents in April was 10 cents more than March, but that still leaves a price drop of 35 cents under last month.

So while the numbers on your milk check may be looking better, marketing conditions have deteriorated considerably so far this year and the end is not in sight. We still have most of the spring flush ahead and by the end of June another 50 cent cut in the support price from $12.10 to $11.60 for milk of average butterfat test. That $11.60 translates into $11.30 for 3.5 milk.

With another price support cut coming so soon, buyers are discouraged from building up their inventories as they would normally at this time of the year. Even the hope that the support price will still be $11.60 after October 1 has been shaken by the recent increases in milk production and the delays in getting a consensus among dairy interests on a price support program for the 1985 farm bill.

Budgets First

Debates on the federal budget proposal in the House have not yet been held, but already they have promised to match the cuts made by the Senate. And when the sacred cows of national defense and Social Security are not immune from budget cuts, what chance is there for a price support program? We don't have accurate figures yet, but the numbers ahead most often include a $2 billion cut for farm programs and nearly half of that in dairy price supports.

There's nothing remotely resembling a consensus among farm organizations, dairy interests and the Administration on a dairy program, and some groups, including National Milk Producers Federation, have not yet put their suggestions into a legislative proposal. Between the time-consuming task of hammering out the final budget and then translating that into a specific dairy program, it appears that we won't make our September 30 deadline. In which case you can look for interim or stop-gap legislation to buy additional time to develop a new price support program.

Such an interim program may simply set a support price with government purchases as we have now. What the support price would be may depend on how much production increases this summer. The $11.60 for average test milk most often quoted how may not be low enough to keep Commodity Credit Corporation purchases of butter, powder and cheese down to an annual budget of $1 billion to satisfy the Administration.

Chore-Time's MEALMASTER FeedKar traveling feeder can help you get your egg costs on track Here's how

1 The typical chain feeder uses 1½ hp to feed each cage tier – 6 hp for a 4-high Our hopper system traveling on tracks is pulled by a cable using only ¼ hp – a 95% energy reduction!

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

A farmer's best asset

One advantage of writing news columns for over 25 years is that occasionally one can be self-indulgent. That means that I can write a column that is not a management column (I hope). This column is an aftermath of "Mother's Day".

In the past, I have used my kids, my wife, and my father to illustrate management points. To date I have never used my mother. Why, I do not know, except how does one impart her words of wisdom when they probably have meaning only to we who were privileged to hear them in the proper context.

For example, one of her expressions was "Roy Walshing it". It was usually used in a tone of disapproval. Yet today when she says that phrase, each one of us gets a guilt feeling and begins to defend or apologize for the action.

It meant doing farm work in the dark, especially after a long day. It went a little further than that because long before there were statistics on farm accidents she realized that a person who was tired had impaired judgement and was therefore more prone to accidents.

Mom was very opposed to us working in the fields after dark when we were tired or visibility was low. We had a neighbor with the name Roy Walsh who ran his tractor well into the night as a general habit, thus the phrase.

She was and still is a very independent person. She was one of the first female school board members in our area and always promoted better education. She was also on the county library board and helped to promote the concept, then the actuality, of a traveling library into all parts of the county.

Reading was and still is an area she loved and tried to instill in every one over whom she had any influence. There was always money for reading material in our household no matter what the financial status of the family.

After reminiscing on the many things my mother meant to us as a family, I got to thinking on the tremendous value "Family Farm Wives" are to, not only their own family, but to the whole agricultural economy.

I have always been an admirer of that unsung hero of the farm front, the farm wife. She is not only the mainstay of the family but is also the second in command on the farm (in many cases, she many well be the first farmer of the operation).

We often talk about the versatility of the American farmer who is a manager, a mechanic, an agronomist, a medic, a chemist, a heavy equipment operator, etc.

But did you ever think about the wife who is the bookkeeper, the chief hired man, a nurse and perhaps even a doctor to both the humans and the animals on the farm, the manager of the household, a counselor and "disher outer" of TLC.

In addition to all this, she can never get sick. After all, if the man of the farm gets sick, she is there to keep things going and take care of "the grouch". When mom gets sick, who gets the children off to school, who finds those important papers, who keeps the calves alive, who pays the bills, who does the wash?

Yes, mothers are a great asset to any family, but they are more than an asset to the typical farm family, they are a necessity. That is one reason I urge a young, prospective farmer to make sure his wife is as enthusiastic about the life of a farmer as he is.

It is also very important for a young farm wife to understand the many hats she may wear in the course of a year. Farming is both one of the most difficult businesses in which to succeed and one of the most rewarding ways of life. At least 50% of both is due to the farm wife's efforts.

For all of you farmers who read this, do yourself a big favor. Give your mother a big kiss just because, then give your wife one as well and tell her you really appreciate her as a person and a partner.

Asgrow "Nugget" changed to "Mesa"

ACCU-LINE™ FEEDING PROGRAM

TWO REASONS WHY THE RALSTON PURINA CO. ACCU-LINE LAYER FEEDING PROGRAM WILL HELP YOU GET A BETTER BOTTOM LINE

Nutritional accuracy is of the utmost importance if you are to regulate egg size without reducing production rates.

Accurate nutrient standards for today's high-producing hens must be set. The usable nutrients in ingredients must also be determined.

Some nutrients in all feed ingredients remain undigested and/or unavailable to the bird. The quantity of usable nutrients depends upon the ingredient, processing methods and other factors. Obviously, it is critical to accurately know the amount of usable nutrients there are in any feedstuff.

To increase the accuracy of Purina's knowledge of biological availability, new techniques were implemented. These new techniques, developed by Canadian researchers and refined by Purina Research give True Metabolizable Energy (TME) and True Amino Acid Availability (TAAA) values.

True Metabolizable Energy is a system which permitted Purina to rapidly reevaluate every feedstuff used in Accu-Line rations and accurately establish the usable energy in those ingredients.

Other feed companies continue to formulate rations using published tables for various feed ingredients. These may not accurately reflect current values.

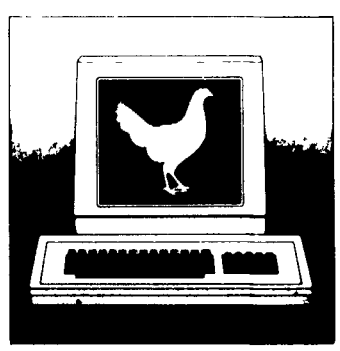
Purina places great emphasis on accurate energy values. Energy is used in all body functions and egg production. It also governs how much hens will eat. When energy requirements are met, birds will stop eating — whether or not they have consumed enough amino acids, minerals and vitamins for maximum performance.

Having accurate energy values is the foundation of precise ration formulation. If the actual energy value is different from the theoretical energy value used in formulation, one of two things will happen:

1. Performance will be reduced because of underfortification of amino acids, vitamins and minerals.
2. Added costs result from an excess amount of these same nutrients that were added to balance an incorrect energy level.

True Available Amino Acid values are equally important. The more accurate Purina knowledge of the usable amino acids in the feed ingredients, the more accurately they can be balanced to the usable energy in the feed.

As a result of these new values, Purina Accu-Line Laying rations can be made from the most efficient combination of ingredients available. The rations accurately supply the hen's daily nutritional needs at the best value possible to Purina customers.



ACCU-LINE™ lets you control egg size to improve profits.

PURINA
Quality.... Performance.... Integrity

In 1902 the red and white checkerboard trademark began appearing on Purina Chow brand feeds. Since then millions of farmers around the world have depended on Purina products to supply the nutritional needs of their livestock, poultry and pets.

Quality

From formulation to production to delivery, Purina works to insure quality. We know how important it is for you to have consistently dependable products. In the feed industry, feeders recognize Purina Chow brand feeds as the standard of quality.

Performance

In today's competitive agricultural economy farmers want and need feeds that produce best value results. Purina performs. Purina Nutritionists, using extensive laboratory facilities and the world famous Purina Research Farm, continually develop new formulas to help feeders improve efficiency and lower production costs.

Integrity

Years ago William H. Danforth, founder of Ralston Purina Company, wrote a book entitled "I Dare You." In it he proposed his four square philosophy of life... Stand Tall, Think Tall, Smile Tall and Live Tall. "Never give up until you have released your unused capacities for service and shared your gifts with others," he challenged. This type of integrity has great meaning for Purina and still sets the standards by which we do business.

Purina Mills, Inc. a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ralston Purina Company, salutes the family of Lancaster Farming subscribers who purchase Purina Chow feeds and Purina Health Products. Through our network of Purina Dealers we continue to pledge you Quality... Performance... Integrity.

Richland Feed Operates Two Thriving Facilities

Richland Feed today consists of two facilities: a retail store at Richlandtown, Pa., with bulk and bag Purina feeds for dairy, hog, poultry, horse and pet. Customized Purina Dairy Feeding programs are offered with roughage analysis to determine forage quality. An operation at Main and Walnut Streets in Perkasie, Pa., provides bulk and bag storage as well as feed manufacturing.

The retail store at Richlandtown has a complete line of seed, Purina health products, lawn and garden, fertilizers, hay and straw.

In 1933 Howard Erney founded Richland Feed and by 1940 had outgrown his small store in Richlandtown, and moved up the street to the newly renovated shoe factory of the Freed Bros.

By 1966 Howard Erney's son-in-law, Stanley Sames, was fully involved in the feed business and in the same year the Purina name was added to the operation.

Richland Feeds today is operated by Ronald and Margaret (Marty) Sames. Diane (Sames) Shick works in office as Bookkeeper and Sales Clerk. Lamont (Monty) Wernett is the swine specialist consultant, with experience in Kleen Leen Breeding Stock and Purina Hi-Octane Hog Chows.

Richland Dealership Keeps Mill And Facilities Updated

Under the leadership of Donald Krall and Clarence Kreider, K&K Feed Inc., of Richland, Pa., offers a diversified line of Purina products, from trout feed to dairy.

Founded in 1920 as John Zug Co., the mill has provided the Richland area with a number of farm services.

Located at 23 N. Park St., K&K Feed has sold Purina products to the public for the past 18 years. Services include: grinding, mixing, bulk and bag delivery, grain drying and storage, torage and grain testing, feed programs and grain buying.

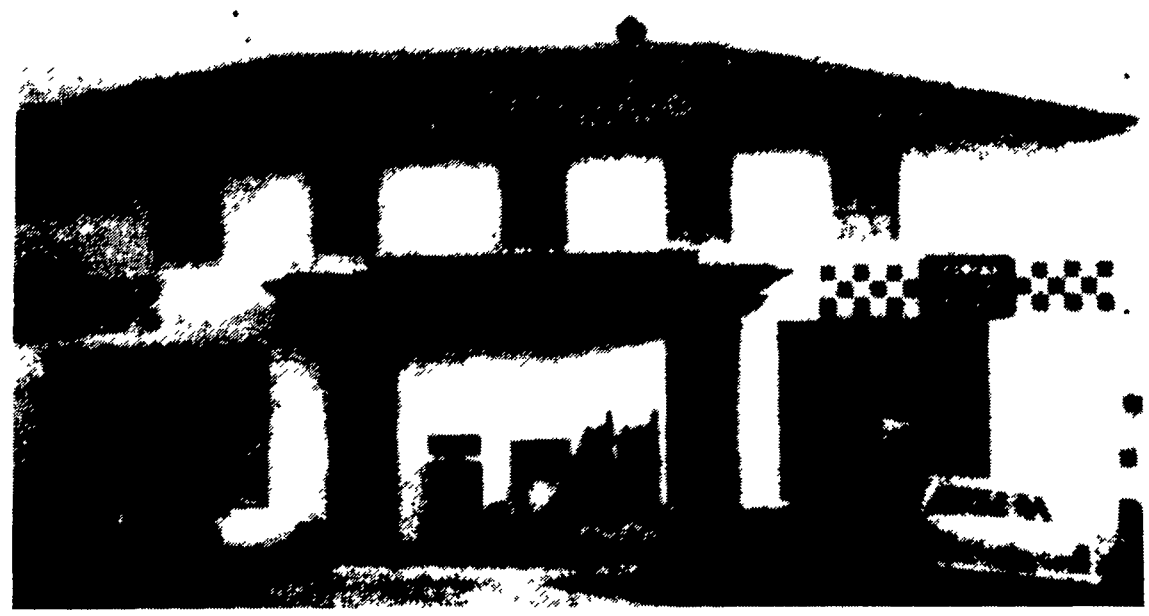
K&K has been a Chow Honor Council winner eight times out of the past 10 years.

The business, Kreider said, stays on top of the dairy industry, which is its primary product group.

With the assistance of dairy consultant Ken Reeder and office manager Barbara Engle, and a handful of employees, K&K Feed has added a grain dryer and grain storage facilities to its seven-acre complex.

They also plan to add new loading equipment to keep the mill updated, Kreider said.

K&K will host a dairy dinner, better known as Customer Appreciation Days, this Fall, to be followed by its annual open house festivities in December.



K & K Feed Inc. is found in the heart of Richland, Pa., and has been serving the area as a Purina dealer for the past 18 years. The company plans to add new equipment to keep the mill updated.

Farmer's Union Co-op Devoted To Purina

Since 1938, the Farmers' Union Co-op in Greencastle, Pa., has offered ample farming services to local farmers.

Beginning as a farmer's cooperative, in 1931 until 1972, the association was a milk-supplier co-op.

From 1931 until 1935 the business was known as Farmers Protective Association Milk Plant.

It wasn't until 1935 that the co-op started handling feed. And in 1981, the cooperative devoted full attention to Ralston Purina feeds.

Today, with some 127 stockholders supporting the longtime cooperative, the business stands behind its committment to the Purina product line. The dealership won their first CHC honor by placing 15th out of 5,000 Purina dealerships in the States, for their phenomenal growth, general manager Dave Forrester said.

In 1980 the business was selling about 40 tons of feed a month. Today, five years later, they are turning over about 300 tons of feed monthly, Forrester noted.

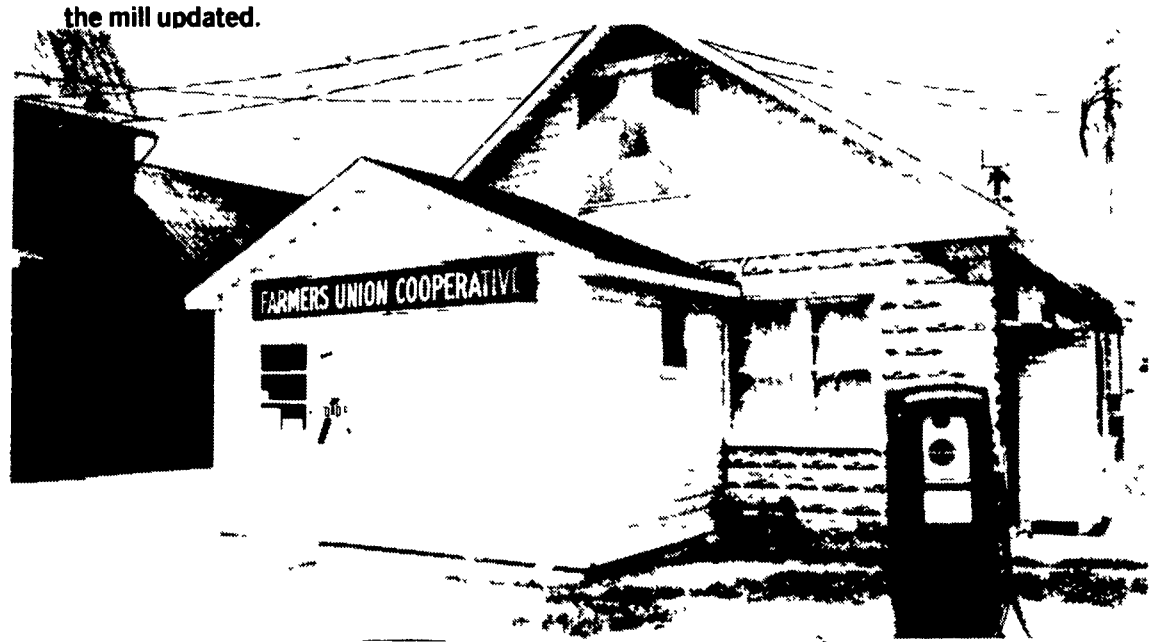
"Purina is the premiere feed company...They have such good facilities, with their own 4-H testing, veterinarians and teachers...They provide legal services, too," Forrester acknowledged.

The people behind the co-op including Forrester are: board chairman, Harold F. Crider; vice-president, Bruce Haldeman; secretary, Max Myers; assistant manager of operations, Dave Oberholzer; and farm consultant, Jim Marshall.

They plan to add more grain and mill storage by next year. A 50,000 bushel tank planned, to supplement the 106,000 bushels of corn already being produced.

Sixty-five to 80 percent of the Farmers Union Co-op is found in the dairy industry, with hogs making up about 25 percent of business. Forrester noted that Purina specialty products are also high on the list.

Farmers Union Co-op is located at 30 E. Walter Ave., Greencastle. For information about their services and organization call, (717) 597-4279.



The offices of Farmers Union Cooperative, Greencastle, Pa., are shown above. The co-op has been a full-time Purina dealer since 1981.

New Freedom Caters To Big Dairy Industry

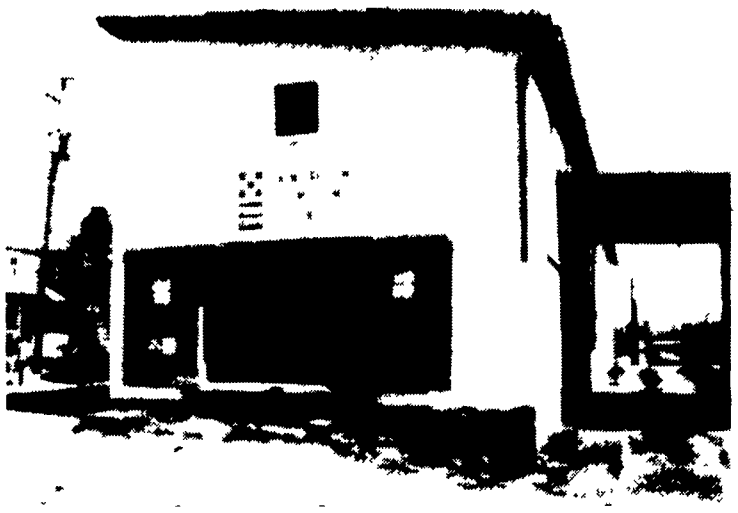
New Freedom Farm & Home Supply, Inc. caters to a sizeable dairy industry in the New Freedom area providing customers, including some four or five "larger" dairy farmers, with grinding, delivery, dairy programming, fertilizers and chemicals.

The facilities are equipped to handle bulk, and have been in existence since 1940, although the Purina dealership wasn't founded until 1975 when president William "Bill" Russell started with the company.

New Freedom Farm and Home Supply was originally known as R.E. Shuchart, Inc.

The company employs five people. John Lufter, mill foreman, has been with the business for the past eight years.

See them at Center Square, New Freedom.



New Freedom Farm and Home Supply Inc., is owned and operated by Bill Russell. New Freedom has been a Purina dealer for about 8 years, and was founded in 1940. The business caters primarily to dairy farmers.

Oxford Grain Extends Customer Service Over Past 65 Years

For over 50 years, Oxford Grain and Hay Company has provided the Oxford area with a full line of Purina quality products.

According to Drennen, Oxford Grain is one of the biggest horse product Purina dealerships in a ten mile radius of Chester County and southern Lancaster County.

Located on 112 Railroad Ave., Oxford Grain and Hay, is operated by Drennen; vice president Lewis E. Shoemaker; Drennen's sons, Donald L., secretary, and Lawrie R., treasurer; and mill manager Lewis E. Shoemaker Jr. Drennen also employs his grandson, Christ.

Custom grinding and mixing was added in the 1950's; bulk storage in the 1960's; and building supplies were added most recently in the 1970's. Oxford Grain and Hay has sold bulk petroleum products since 1946, as well.

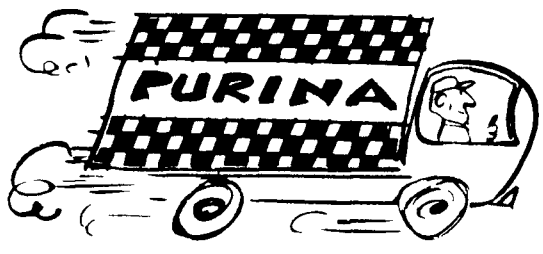
Although the horse products are the business's biggest money makers in the Purina line, Drennen noted that they also do a lot of work with local dairy farmers.



Oakville Feed And Farm Supplies Shippensburg Area

Not yet a year old, Oakville Feed and Farm Supply of Shippensburg, has plans to expand its in-store Purina product inventory, and recently remodeled its retail showroom, according to new owner and president, Morris Kosman.

Working with Kosman are: Les Failor, manager; Sandy Failor, bookkeeper; Donald Hall, farm consultant; and Andy Windowmaker, Ron Weibly and Stanley Martin, all mill hands.

Although the Purina dealership is relatively new, the business has offered milling services to the Oakville and Shippensburg area for the past 50 years, Kosman said.

Anthony's Feed Mill in Family Since 1894

Under the direction of owners Donald and Marilyn Anthony, Anthony's Feed Mill of Strausstown, Pa., has been operating as a professional Purina feed, fertilizer and specialty product dealership since 1979.

The original mill, though, was erected in 1792. Anthony's grandfather, William B. Anthony, purchased the business in 1894. In 1894, the 14-acre tract housed a sawmill, grist mill and farmhouse. The sawmill was rebuilt by William B., and a lot of timber was sawed for canal boats. In 1898, modern flour milling machinery was installed in the old grist mill and a creamery station was operated up until 1905.

Later, in 1926, Anthony's father, George M., acquired the mill and continued to serve the Strausstown area, offering a variety of services. However, at this time, the flour milling business was discontinued. A three-storey warehouse was built in 1932 and the addition containing the present milling machinery was built in 1946. The office annex was added in 1953 and much modernization was done in the sixties.

Today the business continues to thrive and maintains modern services like computerized ration formulation, professional management consultation, and the traditional services of millers, including pelleting, fertilizing, custom mixing and grinding, and a full line of pet products.

The business has seen a great deal of growth over the past century, and the facilities have been expanded to meet its growth potential.

Anthony said that the business caters to the dairy farmer, with about 60 percent of its business tied up in that. A good deal of their products, though, are used by hog, poultry and horse farmers. They also sell Purina products for ducks, beef and rabbits, Anthony mentioned.

Anthony's Feed Mill will have an open house celebration sometime this Fall, when they will run specials on most of their Ralston Purina products.

Purina And Kleen Leen - Products That Breed Success

With a full force of six production herds in the state of Pennsylvania, leading swine genetics company, Kleen Leen Inc. of Checkerboard Square, St. Louis, offers a top line, highly sophisticated service to major swine breeders the world over.

With a total of 80 production herds, most concentrated in areas from Nebraska through New Jersey, Kleen Leen, a product of the Ralston Purina Company, are responsible for the top-producing breeder herds in the country, says division swine services manager, Bion Richards.

Kleen Leen was conceived by Purina in 1962 in Liberty, Ind. The firm, according to Richards, sells breeding stock internationally, specializing in sales in the U.S., Venezuala, Mexico and Australia.

From start to finish, Kleen Leen provides the swine breeder with a multitude of services, including "fresh boar semen which can be transported overnight to virtually anywhere in the world."

Serving the Keystone area with three boar production and three gilt production herds, with 125 to 500 sows per herd, the business insures all animals with the toughest written health warranty in the industry, Richards noted.

With the help of production specialist, Terry Sears, Richards coordinates local Kleen Leen efforts to produce the most lean, healthy and best quality herds.

Most importantly, he noted, Kleen Leen pays careful attention to swine growth, leanness, milking ability, through sophisticated nutritional and handling standards.

Kleen Leen's services are available through most Purina dealerships, with a variety of professional management services and seminars offered to provide the breeder with the best possible product.

According to Richards, Kleen Leen's genetic program is based upon scientific selection criteria for economically important traits. In other words, they strive to provide the best product without a high price.

Kleen Leen uses a European hog selection technique called "genetic potential rating." This process selects hogs based on age and weight, and back fat. Richards explained that this criteria allows feed conversion to care for itself because fast growing hogs are the most efficient. Mothering ability, pig weight at 21 days, and the number of pigs born alive are also notable factors.

Richards noted that in all of Kleen Leen's purebred lines, the growth has been excessive. Since 1978, Kleen Leen has seen the following percentage improvements:

Yorkshire--born alive--up 10.5 percent
Landrace--21 day litter weight--up 6.2 percent
Hampshire--backfat--down 10.8 percent
Daroc--average daily gain--up 18.2 percent

The Kleen Leen advanced purebreed, crossbreed and artificial insemination programs are uniquely customized and designed to offer the most advantageous and sophisticated services available in today's swine breeding market.

W.L. Mummert Has Plans For Expansion

With dairy representing the majority of their Purina dealership, Dick and Janet Hamilton for the past three years have offered a variety of services to the Hanover area.

W.L. Mummert Co. of 6 Pine St., Hanover, was founded 68 years, but it wasn't until just three years ago that the Hamiltons took over the business and opened a Purina dealership. Dick has been associated with Purina for the past 15 years and has studied farm management and animal nutrition. His wife, and co-owner, Janet was affiliated with North Glade Feed, of Keymar, Md., for two years before they bought the Mummert Co.

The retail line includes pet food, bird supplies, preventative medications and treatment medications. They also deal in baby chicks and turkeys. Other services include grinding and dairy programming.

The FFA boy or girl this year will receive a heifer calf from the business, as a token of their appreciation.

Ag Center Tenders Numerous Farm Services

Success has come to a well-known Carlisle dealership after 25 years of hard work and dedication. But the business continues to find ways of improving its outfit by offering the most modern and convenient forms of milling and farming services to the public.

Knisely's Agriculture Center, 1233 Ritner Highway, strives to offer its customers a variety of services designed to improve customers' livestock and their particular farming operation, whether it be dairy, poultry, hog, horse, or the household dog and cat.

Founded in 1960 by George and Ed Knisely, the original Knisely Feed and Farm Supply business fast became a major supplier of Purina products.

In addition to the main facilities on Ritner Highway, the Kniselys also have a grain storage facility and warehouse on Boiling Springs Road, just outside of Carlisle. The company also has a corn drying facility and anticipates buying a corn shelling apparatus in the near future, plant foreman and president, Ed Knisely said.

Running the operation are founder George Knisely, who is now semi-retired, Ed, who is also a farm consultant, and Steve Knisely, who has served as manager of the facility for the past 10 years. Steve recently earned a horse farm consultant degree, enabling him to advise and consult horse owners on specific Purina products.

Although most of Knisely's business concentrates on dairy and commercial poultry, Ed said that a good deal of business is gained from walk-in trade for horse, family flock and dog owners. Knisely also mentioned that the business provides feed and products for exotic and wild bird owners, as well. (The company offers an annual wild bird clinic.)

Helping to make the business grow are Knisely employees: Larry Griffie, miller; Marlin Bitner, bulk delivery; Colleen Kurtz, bookkeeper; Guy Hammond, farm consultant; Marcia Leeds, in-store sales; and Jim Cohick, farm deliveries.

Knisely Ag Center has won the Purina Checker Honor Council Award five times and also has been a recipient of the Purina Great Growth Award.

Knisely's will offer dog dip days throughout the summer and this Fall will give free Purina worm clinics.

Dillsburg Grain & Milling Looks For Bigger Feed Business

For over 40 years Dillsburg Grain and Milling Co. has been supplying Purina pet food products to the Dillsburg area.

Owner and president, Harold C. Willis, who has been with the company for the past 15 years, said that a majority of their business is in the Purina specialty product line.

"We don't sell too much feed yet, but we do sell a lot of fuel oil, coal, fertilizer, gasoline and appliances," the president said.

Working close at hand with Willis are new sales manager Robert Orner, and general manager for 38 years, Paul Hoffman.

Orner was hired about two months ago to "improve the feed service business," Willis noted.

See the Dillsburg Grain and Milling Co. at 99 W. Church St., or call: (717) 432-9711.

Purina Trivia

We also sell specialty feeds for all types of animals, including products for pets, horses, rabbits, research laboratory animals, game birds, furbearing animals, various types of fish and...

An example of how far we've come in animal and poultry feed improvements. In 1900 it took 7 pounds of feed to produce one pound of broiler meat, today it takes only 2.

And this shows the improvement in producing a dozen eggs – 8 pounds of feed in 1900 and only 3.8 pounds or less today. The same approximate conversion rates apply to meat and milk production.

We have operations – mostly feed plants – in 11 countries outside of the United States, including Canada, Mexico, South America, Europe, Korea, and others.

Our Restaurants Business consists of approximately 800 Jack In the Box restaurants located mostly in the Western and Southwestern United States.

The Company's Diversified Businesses consist of food protein products we call isolated soy protein which is almost pure protein and is used as ingredients in other foods.

In order for us to make all these products, we need to purchase a large amount of raw ingredients from farmers. In a single year, Ralston Purina will buy millions of bushels of corn, soybeans and other ingredients to be used in our products.

Albright's Mill Maintains Top Line Milling And Retail Service

The Robert Albright family bought the mill in the mid-twenties and in 1964 the business was sold to Robert Wessner and his son Ronald, by Wessner's grandmother, Edna Albright.

In the late sixties grain handling facilities were added to the operation and in 1975 new mixing and bulk bin equipment was added.

Key employees include: farm consultants Ted Teaford and Nick Kohut (part-time). The business employs some 20 people.

Primary product groups are led by the dairy industry and followed by hog and horse, respectively.

Varied services offered by Albright's Mill include coal sales and delivery, grain storage and sales, bag and bulk delivery, custom formulation, Kleen Leen breeding stock, dairy programming and fertilizer and seed sales.

Visit the staff at Albright's Mill in Kempton, and let them advise you on the best product for your farming needs. Or give them a call, at (215) 756-6022.

M.G. Henninger Strong In Poultry Products

In 1960 Lynn M. Henninger took the reins from his dad, Marlin G., and for the past 25 years he has run a successful Purina outfit in Berrysburg, Pa.

The business was founded in 1928 as a Purina dealership under the auspices of Marlin.

The business has seen a good deal of expansion, including the addition of a new mill after the old mill burned in 1947. The original mill, according to Lynn, was a three story wooden structure, and in 1948 after fire destroyed it, it was replaced by a two story concrete building.

New this year to the business is molasses and crimping machinery. Henninger also has plans to add another warehouse.

The dealership offers services like stationary grinding, soil testing, bulk and bag delivery, portable grinding, farm consultation, contracting for hogs and poultry, fertilizer and spreading, dairy programming, chemicals and liquid fertilizer application and grain banking, drying and purchasing. Everything under the sun.

Key employees of the Henninger business include: office manager John Eberle, mill foreman Lamar Walborn and comptroller Christa Kobel.

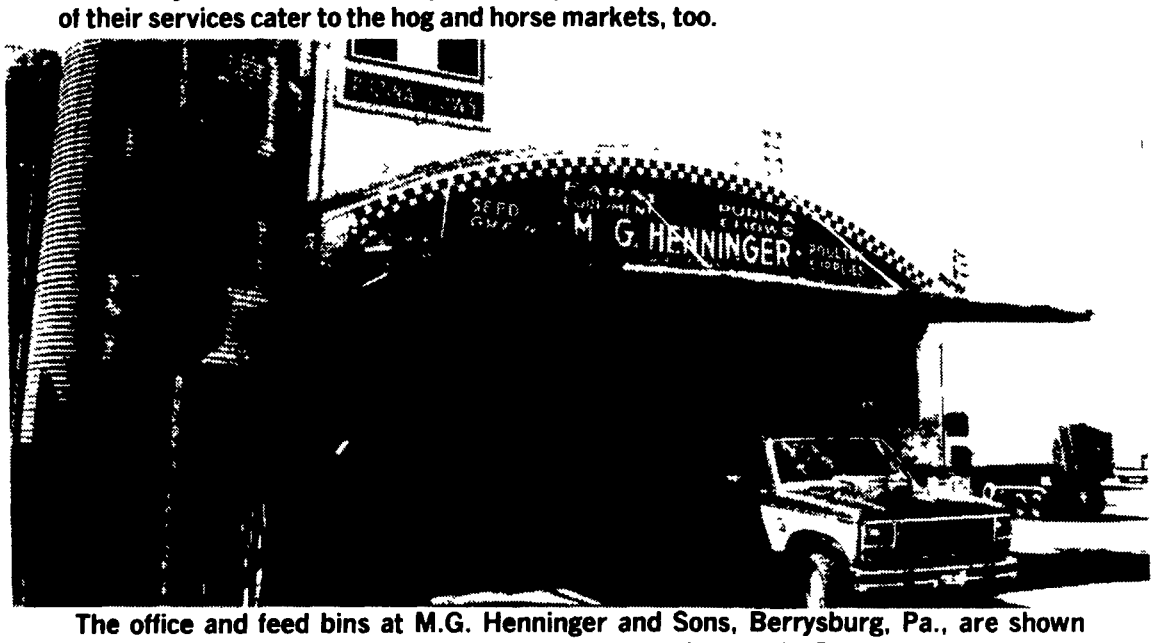
Customer Appreciation Days will be coming up soon, when most retail items will be on sale and the business will open its doors to the public with refreshments, consultation and a strong Purina product line.



The office and feed bins at M.G. Henninger and Sons, Berrysburg, Pa., are shown above. Lynn M. Henninger, son of the founder, currently runs the Purina business.

Robert F. Johns, Mobile Mill driver for M.G. Henninger and Sons, stands with mobile mill at Henninger's Berrysburg location. Mobile milling and molasses have been two recent additions to the Henninger service.

Oley Valley Feed: A Product Of Farm Consultant's Dream

Operating out of the former Cleaver Cheese Factory in Oley, Pa., Oley Valley Feed is coming into its own just about a year after it opened its doors on Covered Bridge and Cleaver roads.

Kohut, who started working for Albright's Mill, and who is there now on a part-time basis, decided he wanted to go into business for himself, Latshaw said. The two of them have seen a good deal of growth over the past year.

Latshaw mentioned that Oley Valley Feed will, in due time, build its own mixing facility. For now, he said, they are strictly a bagging plant.

Some services they offer include: custom formulation, Kleen Leen breeding stock, Farmtronix equipment, bulk and bag delivery and dairy programming.

Much of their business, to date, has been in the Purina pet food and supplies. Dairy, hog and horse are also major product lines, Latshaw noted.

Umberger's of Fontana Inc., Lebanon, has been offering Purina products for the past 53 years to area farmers. The milling and retail operation was founded by William H. Umberger.

Today, his son, Donald H., and grandson, Donald M., help to see continued growth. Homer Kreider and Nevin Hoover also are partners in the business.

Today, the business incorporates sales, milling and warehouse facilities, to its well-known milling operation.

Starting with only 1500 square feet, Umbergers today has about 25,000 square feet to its business.

They have exceptional grain drying facilities, a 100,000 bushel grain storage capacity and bulk handling storage space, as well.

Once known as William H. Umberger, then William H. Estate, then Umberger's Mill, the name was changed to Umbergers of Fontana, Inc., in 1984.

Since 1939, Phillips Feed Service has been gearing its inventory to supply local farms with the best Purina products available in the agriculture market.

In 1958, Ralph's son and partner in the business, opened shop in Bath, Northampton County, which today is the main operation. Just last year, a new operation was started in Morgantown, Berks County, Pa. (The operation was formerly known as Ira Nissely.)

The new Morgantown store is manned by farm consultant, Robert Mulrooney, and store manager, Dave Chambers. The business services the tri-county area of Berks, Chester and Lancaster. The business touts an array of services including: bulk and bag Purina feeds for hog, dairy, poultry and turkeys. They also sell Purina horse and pet feeds, as well as a full line of Purina health care products, fertilizers, sprays, and lawn and garden supplies.

Ellis Steele of Hope, N.J., recently joined the Phillips staff as a farm consultant to service the Sussex, Warren and Hunterdon counties in New Jersey.

The main production plant in Bath provides extensive services to its customers. Some of those services include: bulk and bag feed delivery for dairy, hog, poultry and horse farms; a retail shop, at Bath and Germansville, offering a complete line of Purina pet and Purina health care products; house calls and feed and fertilizer sales.

A mobile grinder comes in handy for those house calls. It's operated by Jacob Temos in the Northampton and Lehigh counties. Grain buying and truck services are also made available to Phillips' customers, as well as hog, turkey and poultry contracting.

Phillips Feed in Morgantown is planning an open house celebration for this summer. Plan to attend. They'll surely have an exciting and informative day planned at their new shop.

For information about Phillips Feed and their services offered, call (215) 837-6061. Or stop by their main office on 7642 Beth-Bath Pike, Bath, Pa.

Dave Chambers and Robert Mulrooney, store manager and farm consultant respectively, are partners in this newly-formed operation in Morgantown, Pa. This is the second Phillips Feed Service established.

Clark's Ag Center Operates Retail And Wholesale Plants

Clark's Feed Mills was established in 1929 by the late Joseph A. Clark near Shamokin, Pa., in a village called Weigh Scales.

During the 1940's a small mill was purchased in Turbotville, with the intent of becoming a grain center. However, as business increased over the years, the Turbotville plant soon became a booming wholesale business. Today there exist 36 wholesale accounts at the Turbotville site, said Marie Clark, wife of Clark's Ag Center owner, Ned Clark.

William and Ned Clark took over their father's business in the 1950's, after receiving ag degrees from Penn State. Contract poultry of heavy roasters fast became the major thrust of business activity.

With a strong need to diversify their product line and to acquire a bigger audience, the Clarks opened a retail shop at the Shamokin plant in 1974. In 1977, Ned took over the Turbotville plant and began the development of the retail and grain facilities there.

The business' main corporate offices are located at the Shamokin plant, however. The facilities are about 30 miles apart; Turbotville is due north of Danville, Pa.

A new load out facility and a large warehouse have been added to the Turbotville plant recently. Currently there are 18 employees at each location.

Some of the offerings at Clark's Ag Center include: grinding, delivery, dairy programming, poultry contracting, hog contracting, forage analysis, custom mixing, grain banking and seed cleaning.

The business has won the Purina Chow Honor Council distinction for three consecutive years.

Three Martin Brothers Run Feed And Fertilizer Business

Founded in 1960 by Mike Martin, Martin's Feed and Fertilizer Inc., of Coburn, Pa., has for the past 10 years sold a complete line of Purina products from its specialty retail shop on Main Street.

Originally known as Penns Creek Flour and Feed Mill, the business has since expanded, adding a 28-foot by 100-foot ear corn storage facility, as well as a 40-foot by 65-foot liquid fertilizer plant.

The family operation today is manned by three Martin brothers: Paul, Bob and Ed. Dennis Fetterolf serves as the business' farm consultant.

Some of their varied services include: grain storage, grinding and mixing, dairy programming, seeds, extensive fertilizer programs, health products and pet foods.

The bulk of their business is dairy but Ed mentioned that they also do well with the horse and hog markets.

Stop by and see the folks at Martin's Feed and Fertilizer. Now's a good time, when the crops are in their formative stages. Martin's can also offer you a full line of animal specialty products.

Keystone Mills Thrives On Retail Business

Ephrata-based Keystone Mills, a 35-year Purina dealer, has big plans for an open house in June, when it will showcase new facilities, retail store, offices and shop, which were moved into in October of 1984.

Owners Melvin and Harold Kurtz carry on a tradition which got its foundation started in 1894 by the brothers' great-grandfather John S. Kurtz. Moses was next in line, and after Moses, Melvin and Harold's father, John B., took the wheel.

The Purina dealership was founded in May, 1950.

Two new farm consultants were introduced in April. They are: Steve Forman and Andy Martin, bringing the total of consultants to 10.

The mill, located in Blue Ball, manufactures products to service dairy, hog and poultry groups. Keystone's services include everything from grinding and delivery to dairy programming and contracting.

Keystone, located on Lancaster Avenue, Ephrata R3, is noted as one of Purina's largest dealers.

New Dealership Moving To Different Clayton Location

Spencer's Milling Service of South Rodney St., will be moving its shop to Route 300. The business, said owner Jack Spencer, is really expanding, with a lot of the work actually done on the road.

Spencer and his wife, Dottie, with the help of farm consultant Gene Garrett and son Mike, provide customers with mobile grinding, delivery, dairy programming, farmtronix sales and farm supplies by Purina.

Spencer's Milling Service earned Purina Chow Honor Council membership in 1984.

The Spencers plan to have an open house just as soon as they open their new shop on Route 300 in Clayton this summer. Be looking for them; they carry a full line of large and small animal supplies.

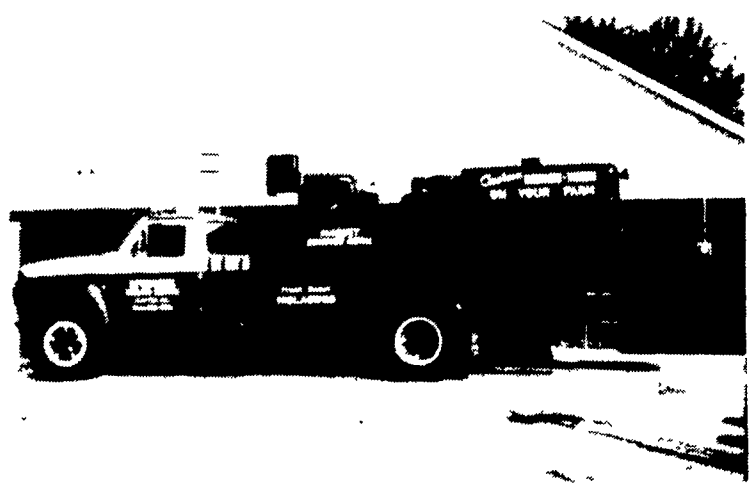
Purina Trivia

Ralston Purina is, of course, more than just products and services. People are the most important factor in the success of Ralston Purina – and the communities in which our employees live. Because it has been successful over the years, the Company recognizes that an appropriate amount of money and volunteer time needs to be returned to the communities in which we have manufacturing or office facilities.

To sum up, Ralston Purina is more than a business entity. It is made up of people who possess a certain Checkerboard spirit which is used in their daily routine as well as is shown here through the Company's very own amateur show cast. A variety show comprised of employees. A unique company function started 70 years ago by William H. Danforth.



One of three mobile mills, shown, is available to service farmers in the Clayton area. Spencer's is located along Route 300, and caters primarily to the dairy industry.

High Bros. Maintains Family Partnership In Gordonville

For seven years in a row, High Bros. Mill, predominant in the dairy industry, in Gordonville, was a Chow Honor Council winner.

The family-operated business is recognized as a dairy feed company, that offers programming, mixing, corn exchange and ear corn pick-up.

Under the auspices of their father, James High, who founded the company in 1945, the brothers High have successfully maintained the 40-year operation from its Centerville Road location.

In a partnership together, the three brothers Leon, mill manager, Doug, farm consultant and Greg, farm consultant and mill worker, have recently expanded their operation by purchasing a mixer and new hammer mill. They're talking about opening a retail showroom, as well.

Doug High Jr. is welcomed this month as a farm consultant. He will graduate from college with a degree in dairy operations, and will likely be a key cog in the wheel at the High Brothers establishment.

Purina Trivia

Welcome to Ralston Purina Company. About 100 years ago when horses and mules were the main source of power and transportation a young man by the name of William H. Danforth got into the business of hand-mixing corn, oats and other ingredients, and selling the mixture as a new feed for horses and mules.

In the mid 1930's, Ralston Purina immortalized the cowboy film star Tom Mix by making him a spokesman for Hot Ralston cereal. Tim encouraged youngsters to join the Ralston Straight Shooters Club. As members they pledged to obey their parents, be fair with friends, improve their mind and body and eat Hot Ralston three times a week.

During his distinguished career Danforth developed a solid philosophy of business and of living – Stand Tall, Smile Tall, Think Tall and Live Tall. This philosophy was even incorporated into the Checkerboard.

World Famous Purina Research Experimental Farm is established near Gray Summit, Missouri. Many of you from St. Louis may have visited the Purina Research Farm about 40 miles west of St. Louis. The farm encompasses 1,580 acres and is devoted to nutritional research on a wide variety of animals and birds.

Where did the Checkerboard trademark come from? Well, as a Boy in Charleston, Missouri, Danforth noticed a family that used to come to town dressed in Checkerboard clothes, because the woman of the family bought Checkerboard cloth by the bolt and made clothes for the entire family from it. Years later, when he was searching for a good way to identify his products, Danforth remembered how those checkers stood out, and so he adopted the Checkerboard as the official Ralston Purina trademark.

Ralston Purina Company has come a long way since the days of Mr. Danforth. Today the Company employs more than 56,000 people on five continents around the world, with annual sales of nearly $5 billion. Our Tower office building was built at Checkerboard Square in St. Louis in 1969 near the site where Danforth started his original business. This is the world headquarters of the Company.

According to Pat McMillan, the company offers delivery, dairy programming, forage testing, hog contracting and a full line of animal health products by Purina. They are recognized as certified horse advisors.

Although most of its business caters to the hog market, J.P. Animal Supply does have a good deal of sales in the horse and dairy markets.

Glenville Farm Center Offers Variety of Purina Services

Originally known as Codorus and Manheim Farmers Association, the Glenville Farm Center, Inc., has been providing dairy farmers with Purina products for the past seven years.

The actual business was founded in 1922 as a cooperative, and was later bought by the Stoneseifers of Keymar, Md. In 1978 the business was sold to Paul Jr. and Doris Leas, who now operate the Glenville plant and retail store.

In 1955, the original building was expanded with an additional 40-by-60 feet. Additional warehouses were built in 1967, as well.

The business offers custom grinding, bulk and bag deliveries, grain storage, fertilizer and seed, plus a number of related Purina products and services, according to Leas.

Hess Mills: A Paradise Family Operation For Past 60 Years

Hess Mills of Paradise and Unionville started out as a one-room feed hopper in 1904, under Amos S. Hess. Today, John J. Hess, II (Jack) has built on the success of his father and grandfather and can boast a healthy, profitable business in two locations serving hundreds of customers!

In the beginning, A.S. Hess & Son (original name for Hess Mills) was a water-powered flour mill located along Route #772 in Salisbury Township. In those days, farmers brought their grain (wheat, etc.) to the mill to be ground into flour. There wasn't much feed business because the majority of Agrarians were mainly subsistence farmers growing only what their families needed. Slowly, an upswing in the economy bolstered a boom in animal husbandry. The feed business started to pick up and Hess' feed business improved with it. Seizing an opportunity to expand, Jack's father, John J. Hess, purchased a milling property off of South Vintage Road in Paradise (the site of one of the present-day Hess Mills). This was a joint venture between father and son (Amos and John) until Amos's demise in 1936, at which time John took over the entire operation. Jack stayed in the wings until 1946 when he bought a flour mill in Intercourse and a feed business in New Providence. Jack sought to capitalize on the existing feed market and hold his own as sole proprietor. He did so successfully, and in 1958 Jack succeeded his father claiming complete responsibility for all Hess operations.

Over the years the feed business had changed. In old days the farmer brought his grain to the mill for grinding. As time passed and farmers diversified their farming efforts to include cash crops, feed crops and animal husbanding, they visited the mill less. This forced milling operations to become mobile and be able to service farmers' needs at the farm. In keeping with this change, feed mills needed to get heavily into bulk trucking and feed delivery. Jack followed the going trend and consolidated all of the milling operations to the South Vintage Road location, which was better equipped for grain handling (with bulk feed bins.) Because he changed with the times, Jack's business (Hess Mills) has seen 100-fold growth since he took charge in 1958.

As growth took its course at Hess Mills, Jack expanded by purchasing a warehouse/retail store in Unionville, PA, on January 1, 1984. This facility is managed by his son, John J. III and claims a large share of the horse feed market in the lower Lancaster and Chester County areas. In addition the store offers a wide variety of feeds for pets and farm stock plus a team of farm consultants expert in poultry, hog, and dairy stock; all are fully-backed by the Ralston-Purina Company.

In recogniotion of the fine job Jack and his company of pros have done at Hess Mills, Purina's Chow Honor Council awarded Hess Mills the 1985 top performer award.

Woodstown, N.J. Operation; From Ice And Coal To Dairy

In 1916, when World War I was fast becoming an economic and emotional plight, Woodstown Coal and Ice was generating power and blocks of ice to area folks in need. "It was a time when food lockers were popular...when milk was delivered by the can and traveled from here to Philadelphia," said Horace Seibert, general manager of the Woodstown, N.J., operation since 1964.

Seibert explained that the business, originally an old flour mill, and utility and ice-making facility called Woodstown Coal and Ice Storage, has since become a full-service Purina product operation, as well as a recognized Servi Star hardware dealer.

The old office was converted to the first retail store in 1964. The salesroom was enlarged in 1982, and again in 1984, when Woodstown Ice and Coal became a Servi Star dealer.

Seibert said there are plans for adding a modern warehouse facility.
